WALKERBURN is a village, in the civil parish of Innerleithen and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Innerleithen and Traquair; it is on the north bank of the Tweed and is supplied with spring water from the neighbouring hills, and has a station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, about 8 miles south-west from Peebles. In the village is a Public hall holding 500 people. About forty years ago it consisted of two cots and a farm house. About this time the late Henry Ballantyne esq. founded its manufacturing industry, he having secured the use of the Tweed as a motive power for the mills, and subsequently, in a few years, he and the late Robert Freer built woollen factories. Messrs. James Dalziel & Co. are the present proprietors. The two mills give employment to a number of hands. Population in 1881, 1,026, and in 1891, 1,288.

PERTHSHIRE.

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the country, and forming the south-eastern district of the Highlands. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is separated for a considerable distance by the Firth of Tay; further on the south its boundaries are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on both sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyllshire, and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire and Aberdeenshire. The contour of the county is very irregular. From the Firth of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athole, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures 68 miles; and from Meigle on the east, to Argyllshire on the west, about 77 miles. The area of Perthshire is estimated at 1,617,808 acres, or 2,527 square miles. The population in 1891 comprised 59,743 males and 66,441 females, total, 126,184, against 129,046 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 27,638 in 1891, and 26,729 in 1881. In size it ranks as the fourth, the three larger being Argyllshire, Inverness-shire and Ross and Cromartyshire, and in population as the eighth of the Scottish counties.

Early History.—The Romans appear to have extended their conquests into this county, though it lay north of their great wall between the Forth and Clyde; they are recorded to have settled a colony on the site where Perth now stands. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. From 446, some 30 years after the Romans retired, until 843, when Perthshire fell under the Dalriadan rule, this portion of Britain was ruled by Pictish kings, and it was in consequence of a marriage between a daughter of this race and a king of the Dalriads that these latter gained the country, and they are believed to have transferred to Scone Abbey the "Stone of Destiny," about 850; in the next century the Danes penetrated here and were defeated by Donal IV. and Constantine III. at Forteviot, early in the century, and again in 961 at Luncarty. In the 11th century the Northumbrians who were established in the Lothians penetrated in this county and defeated Macbeth, in 1056, at Dunsinnane; and until the middle of the 17th century the clan feuds kept the country in a restless state. In August, 1650, Cromwell, after his victory at Dunbar, took Perth; and on 26 July, 1689, Viscount Dundee defeated General Mackay (William III.'s general) at Killiecrankie, in the north of the county, and, in August, William's forces gained a victory at Dunkeld. In 1715 Mar gained a doubtful victory at Sherriffmuir, and in 1745 Perth was occupied by Prince Charles Edward. Before the Reformation and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the diocese of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dunblane.

Soil, Surface, Climate and Produce &c.—Perthshire is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdiction established in 1748, were stewartries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Menteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbane, Rannoch, Balquhidder and Athole. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged in the more natural divisions of Highland and Lowland, the uplands around the range of Grampians forming the line of demarcation. 18 parishes belong to the Highland portion, while that of the Lowland comprises 58, but though the latter comprise more parishes, the former covers the larger area, Blair Athol parish having 181,114 acres and Fortingall, 196,683. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the carse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses, particularly in Menteith district, but with the progress of agriculture some of these have been partially reclaimed. Five-eighths of the area of the county consists of heath land and woods. The climate on the whole is mild and salubrious, especially in the south, but in the north and west the cold is more general, in consequence of the elevated nature of the country; these districts are, nevertheless, dry and healthy, being screened by the Grampians from the northern blasts. The mountains of greatest altitude in Perthshire are: Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben More, 3,903; Ben a' Ghlo, 3,724; Schieballion, 3,561; Ben Dearg, 3,550; Ben Vorlich, 3,224; Ben Ledi, 2,875; Ben Venue, 2,386; Ben Chonzi, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584; and Ben Tulachan, 3,099 feet above the level of the sea. Perthshire is famous for its extensive deer forests, and abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers; the red deer inhabit the forest and mountain glades and are very wild; but the roe appears, even in the summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places. The extent of deer forests in this county is about 100,000 acres, being much less than Rosshire and Inverness-shire. Athole, the largest forest in area in Perthshire, being 50,000 acres; Tealan, 14,000; Glenartney, 15,000; and Rannoch, 10,000. The shootings form a considerable item in the revenue of the proprietors, being let for the season at large rentals to gentlemen, principally for pastime and sport; and in addition they afford employment to a number of persons in various capacities; other game besides deer comprise grouse, pheasants, woodcock, ptarmigan, capercailzie, hares &c. The lochs and rivers also provide good fishing for salmon, trout and pike. Within the last century there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire. The late Duke of Atholl took a distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1830, that he planted 15,473 English acres, the plants amounting to the enormous number of 27,231,600; of these plantations, the principal portion, to the amount of about 8,600 acres, are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder being Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch &c. The same nobleman exerted himself for the improvement of the roads of the county, which have been brought into excellent condition. During the present century a great change has been effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie in cultivation, wealth, and beauty with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southwards for sale and consumption. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes and turnips are all cultivated. The chief crops are oats, 68,492 acres; turnips, 30,293; barley, 15,101; potatoes, 13,214 and wheat, 5,626; the total corn crops being 92,150, and green crops, 44,278 acres; hay of all kinds occupying 42,878 acres. Land under grass is 96,905 acres; permanent pasture, 101,072 acres; heath and mountain land, 909,890 acres; and the total area of land and water, 1,632,782. The minerals are not of sufficient importance to be worked as a commercial venture. Limestone rocks are found in a variety of localities, both in the high and low country; but the use of lime is greatly impeded from the want of proper fuel for burning it—peat, which is the fuel of all the inland districts, being very ineffectual for the process of calcination. Marble of a superior quality is worked near Glentilt; beds of fire clay have been discovered near Culross, and in that neighbourhood, on the Devon, there is abundance of ironstone. About Callander the species of rock called "breccia," or more familiarly, "plum pudding stone," is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stone quarries in this country; the principal stone of which the Grampians consist is granite. The principal industry in the towns and villages of Perthshire is the weaving of linen goods; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields have been established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen—tweeds, winceys, blankets, and other woollen goods being produced. Cotton spinning works are in operation at Stanley and Doune; and considerable dye works, distilleries, breweries and tanneries, together with iron foundries, engineering works &c. are found in several towns and villages.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers. The chief rivers are the Tay, the Earn, the Garry, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummel, the Bruar, the Ericht, the Ardle, the Shee, and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth-rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Voil, Loch Lubnaig, Loch Dochart and Loch Earn. Those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay in the centre of the mountainous district, and Loch Rannoch, Loch Ericht, and Loch Lydoch, the two latter in part only, in the north-west quarter. In the lower division there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters in this county are those of Pitcaithly, near the Bridge of Earn, which have long been famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula and complaints of the stomach. The railway system comprises lines belonging to the Caledonian, the North British, and the Highland railways, which all centre in the city of Perth. The Caledonian enters the county from Aberdeen at Alyth Junction, passing through Coupar Angus and Cargill to Perth, and thence, by a line through the Carse of Gowrie, to Dundee; one, via Auchterarder and Dunblane, to Stirling (a branch from Dunblane running to Callander and Killing and on to Oban) and one from Crieff Junction to Crieff, where it joins a line from Crieff to Comrie, and another from Crieff to Methven and Almond Bank, and from Coupar Angus a line runs to Blairgowrie. The North British enters the county at Newburgh, from Ladybank Junction, and at Glenfurg, from Mawcarse Junction, both lines running to Bridge of Earn and thence to Perth; and this railway runs over the line via Cargill, Coupar Angus and Meigle, and sends a branch from Alyth Junction to Alyth. The Highland runs from Perth, via Luncarty, Dunkeld, Ballinluig (whence there is a branch to Aberfeldy) and Pitlochry, through Glengarry to Kingussie.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Perthshire comprehends 73 entire parishes. The county is divided into 10 districts, Athole, Balquhidder, Breadalbane, Glenshee, Gowrie, Menteith, Rannoch, Strathardie, Strathearn and Stormont, each under the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace court and deputy-lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff-substitute districts, called Eastern and Western, and controlled from Perth and Dunblane. The shire contains one royal burgh, the city of Perth, which returns one member to Parliament, and the county for parliamentary purposes is now separated into two divisions, and sends one member for each. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 was: East Division, 7,641; West Division, 7,984. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 (exclusive of railways and waterworks, which was £119,714) was £814,185.

ABERFELDY is a town and police burgh in the parish of Dull, and in the poor combination of Atholl and Breadalbane, with a junction station on the Highland railway, from whence there is a branch to Ballinluig, 18 miles north-west from Dunkeld, 9 west from Logierait and 6 north-east from Kenmore; the town stands on the south bank of the beautiful river Tay, on the Great Highland road, which crosses the river by an elegant bridge of three arches, constructed by the celebrated Maj.-Gen George Wade, sometime M.P. for Hindon and Bath, and who, during the years 1725-6, superintended the formation of a number of military roads in the Scottish Highlands. The town, which is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water, was constituted a police burgh in 1887 under the Lindsay Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, who is ex-officio a justice of the peace for the county, two bailies, and eight commissioners. A sheriff small debt court is held in the Town Hall on the last Saturday of March, July and November. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a woollen factory. The principal hotels are the Breadalbane Arms and the Station hotel, the former being much patronised in the season by visitors on account of the facilities it affords for fishing in the Tay and Loch-na-Craig, the hotel only having the privilege of the loch and a joint right with the Aberfeldy Angling Club in the river. The celebrated 42nd Highlanders, commonly known, on account of their dark tartan, as "the Black Watch," were enrolled in this district, but consisted in the first instance of armed detachments of loyal clans employed during the period 1725-39 to watch the Highlands. In 1887 a monument was erected here, in the form of a cairn, at a cost of about £500, to commemorate the formation of the regiment. In the neighbourhood are the romantic falls of Moness. Several fairs were formerly held in the course of the year; but the only one now is on the last Thursday in October (old style), for cattle and sheep; weekly cattle sales are held on Thursday. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C., D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The rateable value is £6,894; the population in 1881 was 1,260, and in 1891, 1,469.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Miss Jane Cowper, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 & 9.45 a.m. & 5 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches during July, August & September, 6.45 a.m. & 1.35, 4.30 & 8.15 p.m.; other months, 6.50 a.m. & 1.40, 4.35 & 8.15 p.m

ABERFOYLE is a parish and village, in the small debts court district of Dunblane; the parish is bounded on the north by Loch Katrine, and on the south by the Duchray water, and is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it, as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, of much interest to the botanist. The village, or "clachan," of Aberfoyle has a station on a branch from Stirling, via Buchlyvie, of the North British railway, and is about 18 miles north-west from Stirling and is the scene of some incidents in Sir Walter Scott's novel "Rob Roy," and at the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid basin, embedded in surrounding woods, over which rises the gracefully towering form of Ben Lomond, one of whose summits is 3,192 feet above the level of the sea. A wooded promontory here jutting out into the water is said to have been the spot on which the skirmish described in "Rob Roy" occurred, and where Helen Macgregor made her first appearance. Loch Ard and Loch Chon, near Aberfoyle, are considered the earliest fly-fishing lochs in Scotland, fish taking readily early in March. In this parish is Benvenue mountain, 2,393 feet high. The Bailie Nicol Jarvie hotel here provides excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors, and affords a good supply of boats. About a mile north of Loch Chon is the source of the river Forth. Fairs are held within the parish on the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The Duke of Montrose K.T.; Edward Walter Joynson esq. of the Glassert; Mrs. Dalziel; Lieut.-Col. Hy. Robert Eyre J.P. of Dundhu; W. H. Bolton; Hugh Kennedy; James Blair; J. Russell Lindsay and James S. Mair esqrs. are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Aberfoyle contains an area of 26,810 acres; rateable value £17,800; the population in 1881 was 465, and in 1891, 1,023, and 943 in the ecclesiastical.

ABERNETHY is a parish and village and burgh of barony, formerly in the counties of Fife and Perth, but now included entirely in the latter, by order of the County Council commissioners. The parish is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo, and on the west by Dron and Arngask, and is between 5 and 6 miles both in breadth and length. The village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom of Scotland, is scattered, and is about two-thirds of a mile south-west of the river Earn, 8 miles south-east from Perth, and 14 west from Cupar, in Fife, with a station on the Ladybank Perth branch of the North British railway. Abernethy burgh is governed by two bailies, 15 councillors, a treasurer and a town clerk; it has been constituted a police burgh for sanitary purposes, under the Lindsay Police Act, 1862. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in salmon fishing and weaving. In an angle of the burial ground of the Established church stands a circular tower, about 75 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at its base. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts. On the outside of the tower is yet to be seen the jougs (a padlocked collar and chain), for the detention of offenders in bygone days. Aberargie is a small village about a mile and a half to the west. Glenfoot is a hamlet. A hill, a little to the north of Binn farm, commands one of the finest views in Scotland, comprising Strathmore, Strathearn, the Grampians, Ochills, Sidlaws, Pentland hills, Firth of Forth, Lochleven Castle, Glen Farg &c. A fair is held on the fourth Wednesday in May. The Earl of Mansfield K.T., D.L. of Schaw Park, is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish is 9,544 acres; rateable value, £11,623; the population in 1881 was 1,714, and in 1891, 1,550, the police burgh having 852 of this number.

ALYTH is a town and police burgh and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth and in the small debt court division of Blairgowrie. The parish formerly extended into Forfarshire, and included a portion of Mount Blair, a conspicuous hill 2,260 feet above the level of the sea, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 40 to 50), boundary order 92, the Forfarshire portion has been transferred to this county. The parish is divided into two considerable districts by the hills of Alyth, Loyal and Barry. The southern district lying in the strath is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and as well as the tract of land towards the hills, is fertile and verdant, and watered by the river Isla and several small streams. The town, pleasantly situated at the base of a range of hills on the small river Alyth, is 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 20 north-north-east from Perth, 17 north-west from Dundee, 12 west from Forfar, 5 north-east from Blairgowrie, and 4 north-west from Meigle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, completed in 1861. The town is lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with good water, and being within an easy distance of Dundee, receives a number of visitors from that neighbourhood during the summer months. A new and substantial stone bridge was erected in 1883 over the Alyth stream, at a cost of nearly £900. Alyth was created a burgh of barony by James III. but in 1862 the Lindsay Police Act was adopted and the town is now governed (according to the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892") by a police commission, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A police court is held when necessary. The parish church is an imposing edifice of stone in the Norman style, with tower and lofty spire. There are two mills employed in the manufacture of linen, and another for making woollens etc. and the combined factories afford work for a large number of the inhabitants. Fairs are held for hiring, cattle and sheep, the first Wednesday in November (old style) and the third Tuesday in May. A newspaper, "The Alyth Guardian," is published here on Fridays. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Town and County Bank Limited. The principal hotels are the "Commercial" and the "Airlie Arms." The Public Library was erected from a bequest of £300 left by the late Hon. William Ogilvy, of Loyal, who also bequeathed the interest of a further sum of £200 for its support, and it now contains several thousand volumes. There are also several other benefactions, including the Balendoch fund, a sum of £30 per annum, bequeathed by the late Gilbert Hay esq. for the education and clothing of six boys and six girls, those of the names of Hay and Halkett being preferred; now merged, along with the Duncan, Fleming and Robertson Mortifications, into a new scheme under the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Commission, the Fenton Mortification, being £800 left by Mr. John Fenton, for providing coals and clothing for the poor; and the Ramsay bequest, being the interest of £418 left by the late Dowager Lady Ramsay, of Banff, to be distributed annually among the poor of the district. Banff House is the residence of Sir James Henry Ramsay bart. M.A., D.L. The Earl of Airlie K.T. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The entire civil parish contains an acreage of 23,296; rateable value, £36 493; the population in 1881 numbered 3 521, and in 1891, 3.453, of which the town contained 2 322; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,275.

ARNGASK (a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth) and GLENFARG (its village), formerly considered as in the counties of Kinross, Fife and Perth, are now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), wholly in Perthshire, except on the occasion of parliamentary elections, when the ballot is divided between the three counties. The form of the parish is nearly circular; it is about 4 miles in diameter, and about 2 west from Glenfarg station on the Mawcarse Junction and Perth branch of the North British railway, and about 6½ miles north from Kinross. The Farg together with other streams in the vicinity afford good sport to the angler and present some beautiful scenery. The parish contains an Established church, in the churchyard of which is the grave of Major-General John Agmondesham Vesey Kirkland D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. of Fordel, interred here 27 March, 1896; he raised the 2nd Battalion of 5th Foot in 1857, and commanded it for 12 years. There is a station at Glenfarg on the Edinburgh and Perth section of the North British railway; about a mile from which are the hamlets of Duncreivie and Drunzie. Acreage, 6,452; rateable value, £5,779; population in 1881, 547, and in 1891, 564.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Glenfarg (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Perthshire); Peter Anderson, postmaster. Delivery, 8.35 a.m.; dispatched, 9.45 a.m. & 5.5 p.m

AUCHLEEKS, see BLAIR ATHOLL.

AUCHTERARDER is a town and police burgh, the head of a presbytery, and a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth, and poor law combination of Upper Strathearn. The town stands on the high road between Perth and Stirling, and on the south bank of the river Earn, 14 miles south-west from Perth and 20 north-north-east from Stirling, and has a station, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway. It was once a royal burgh, but under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," it is now governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. Under a special Act of Parliament, the town owns about 200 acres of arable land, managed by 13 commissioners, two of whom retire annually, with the exception of the proprietor of the Lower barony, whose seat at the board is permanent; power is given in the Act to feu 30 acres. The town is lighted with gas by a limited company, and an ample supply of excellent water is obtained from the Coalbore springs. Aytoun Hall, which stands in the centre of the town, was erected in 1872, by the inhabitants as a memorial to the late Captain Aytoun, of Glenavon, who in 1832 provided the town with its first water supply. The principal manufactures are fancy shirtings and woollen tweeds. The corn market is held on Saturday, and live stock sales every alternate Saturday. Auchterarder House is the residence of Mrs. Reid; Cloanden, that of Mrs. Haldane, and Kincardine Castle, of James Johnston esq. J.P. The trustees of the late James Reid, of Auchterarder House, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 11,181 acres; rateable value, £17,914; the population in 1881 was 3,648, and in 1891, 3,494; the town possessing 2,524 of this number.

AUCHTERGAVEN is a parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, and lies on the south-west bank of the Tay, and on the south-east side of Birnam hill. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), parts of the parish were transferred to Moneydie and Monzie parishes, and a part of Methven added to Auchtergaven. In the parish are extensive linen works. The Duke of Atholl K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 12,941; rateable value, £11,498; the population in 1881 was 2,195, and in 1891, 2,081, of which Bankfoot contained 673; of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,263.

Bankfoot village in this parish is on the road from Perth to Dunkeld, 3¾ miles north from Strathord station on the Perth and Dunkeld section of the Caledonian system, about 9 north-west from Perth and 6 south-east from Dunkeld.

BALQUHIDDER is a Highland parish, in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians, and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The village, situated at the east end of Loch Voil, is 3 miles from Lochearnhead station, and 13 north-west from Callander, and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy, whose grave is pointed out in the churchyard. It was visited by Her Majesty and Princesses Louise and Beatrice in 1869. Rob Roy (Robert Macgregor Campbell), born 1660, was a highland chieftain, and became a freebooter 1716, and died 1735. The parish is mountainous and pastoral, and the numerous acclivities it contains have originated the popular reference to the "Braes of Balquhidder;" among its mountain peaks Ben Chabhair rises in conspicuous superiority, and the lakes include Loch Doune, Loch Voil, part of Loch Lubnaig, and part of Loch Earn, with several of minor celebrity. The rivers Lochlang and Balvag flow through the centre of the parish. James Carnegie esq. D.L. of Stronvar; John B. Hamilton esq. of Strathyre; Lady Helen L. MacGregor, of Edinchip; the Marquess of Breadalbane; the Earl of Moray and John Stewart M'Donald esq. of Craigruie, are the principal landowners. Balquhidder civil parish has an area of 54,674 acres; rateable value, £9,800; the population in 1881 was 627, and in 1891, 612, and in the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Comrie, 728.

Lochearnhead, a beautiful little village in this parish, stands at the head of Loch Earn, from which it derives its name, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, 2 miles distant from the hotel. The village has been twice visited by the Queen; the first time with H.R.H. the Prince Consort in 1841, and again in September, 1869, in company with the Princesses Louise and Beatrice, who stayed at the hotel while on a visit to Sir Malcolm, chief of the Macgregors, and Lady Helen Macgregor, whose seat, Edinchip, is within half a mile of the village. The loch, which lies at the foot of Glen Ogle, a wild pass, or outlet, from the Breadalbane country and the north-western Highlands, is 8 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and said to be 100 fathoms deep. The beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with the many objects of interest, and the fine scenery, attract many visitors, tourists and private families during the summer months. The views include the fine scenery about the lake, the upper part of Strathearn, and the mountains, one of which (Benvoirlich) rises from the shore to a height of 3,300 feet. Excellent fishing, free to parties staying at the hotel, may be had in the loch, and omnibuses meet all trains. Population returned with the parish.

Strathyre is a small village in the parish of Balquhidder, 8 miles north-west from Callander, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway. There are two inns and a temperance hotel. Population returned with the parish. The Strathyre and Balquhidder districts of the parish, as well as Lochearnhead, are favourite resorts for summer visitors.

BLACKFORD is a parish and village, and has a station on the main line of the Caledonian railway from Edinburgh to Aberdeen; it is 10 miles north-east from Dunblane and 5 south-west from Auchterarder. The parish extends 10 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 4 to 6 miles; it is in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is bounded north by Trinity Gask, east by Auchterarder, south by Glendevon and part of Clackmannan and west by Muthill and Ardoch. The station of Crieff Junction is also in this parish. Lying at the north-west end of the Ochill hills, the southern portion of the parish is hilly; the soil north of this being of sandy nature, with a rolling surface. There are two breweries and a tannery. South of the railway are Gleneagles, the seat of the Earl of Camperdown, and the ruins of old Kincardine Castle, once a stronghold of the Graham family, now Dukes of Montrose and Earls of Kincardine, while north of the railway are the ruins of Tullibardine Castle and chapel, the former a possession of the Murrays of Tullibardine, ancestors of the Dukes of Athol; the chapel being the burial place of the family, but now used by the Strathallan family, whose castle lies about 6 miles to the north of the village, and is the residence of Col. J. R. Stewart, Viscount Strathallan residing at Muchany House in the same neighbourhood. Captain W. H. Drummond Moray is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 21,453 acres; rateable value £14,342; the population in 1881 was 1,595, and in 1891, 1,522.

The population of the village was 679 in 1881 and 666 in 1891.

Tullibardine is a scattered village in this parish, 3 miles north-west of Auchterarder, with a station on the Crieff Junction and Comrie section of the Caledonian railway.

BLAIR ATHOLL,

WITH THE BRIDGE OF TILT, CALVINE AND STRUAN.

BLAIR ATHOLL is a parish and small village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district; what is now designated the parish of Blair Atholl formerly consisted of four parishes, viz.: Blair, Lude, Kilmavonaig and Strowan. The district of Atholl is 45 miles in length and 30 in breadth, and the parish is 24 miles from north-east to south-west, and 20 from north to south. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingal, Foss and Moulin, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeenshire, and on the east by Kirkmichael and Moulin, and on the west by Rannoch, and contains a large tract of Highland territory, several of the mountains of which are covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales. The valley of the Garry, from the pass of Killiecrankie to the point of Strowan, may be considered the nucleus of the parish. The principal lakes and rivers are Loch Garry and Loch Tummel, and the Tummel, Tilt, and Garry, all abounding with a variety of fish. The woods in the neighbourhood are very fine, some of the larches being the oldest in Scotland. Three miles to the west of the village are the Falls of Bruar, consisting of a succession of cascades in a ravine of romantic beauty. The banks are covered with woods, planted by a former Duke of Atholl. The mountains in the parish are Ben Dearg, 3,304 feet; Ben-a-Ghlo, 3,671 and Ben Udlamian, 3,306 feet in height. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Dull and Moulin have been added to this parish. The village of Blair Atholl stands on the north side of the river Garry, and on the road from Dunkeld to Inverness, 20 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 7 north-west from Pitlochry, and has a station on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway; it is lighted with gas, and there is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Lim. and two good hotels. The parish church, between the villages of Blair and Bridge of Tilt, is a plain but commodious structure. The Free church was erected 1856. The old Episcopal church of Kilmaveonaig is an ancient edifice, bearing the date 1591, and was rebuilt in 1794. Blair Castle, the family residence of the Duke of Atholl K.T. is within a short distance of the village, and has been restored from designs by Mr. Bryce, architect, of Edinburgh. The Duke of Atholl K.T. and William M'Inroy esq. J.P. of Lude, are the principal landowners. The area is 181,114 acres; rateable value, £25,983; the population in 1881 was 1,742, and in 1891, 1,808, ecclesiastical, 1,560, of which Blair Atholl and Bridge of Tilt numbered 349.

Bridge of Tilt is a small village in this parish, separated only from Blair Atholl by the water of Tilt, which is here crossed by a bridge, as the name indicates.

Calvine is a hamlet in this parish. The scenery around is very charming, and includes Glen Tilt, the Falls of Fender &c. all combining to interest the tourist. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Atholl K.T. Struan railway station is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

Struan, or Strowan is a small village in the parish of Blair Atholl, and 5 miles north, with a station on the Highland railway. In the churchyard is a remarkable stone with a Runic inscription. Population returned with the parish.

BLAIR DRUMMOND, see THORNHILL.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a town, burgh of barony and police burgh, and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth. The parish, about 11 miles in length and 3 miles wide, is beautifully situated, on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which runs the great north road to Fort George, and is divided by the Grampian Hills, which rise immediately north of the town. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary order 72, parts of the parishes of Bendochy and Kinloch have been added to Blairgowrie, and part of Blairgowrie annexed to Bendochy. The town is 12 miles east from Dunkeld, 5 south-west from Alyth, and 4½ north from Coupar Angus, with a terminal station on a branch from Coupar Angus, on the Caledonian railway, opened in 1855. The river Ericht passes close to the town, forming the eastern boundary of the parish, and propels the machinery of several flax-spinning mills; there are also engineering works and a brewery. On account of its attractive surroundings, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from a distance. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in 1634, by a charter from Charles I. and is now governed by a baron bailie, 2 junior bailies and 9 councillors, and also by a board of police commissioners, consisting of a provost, 2 junior bailies and 9 commissioners. A sheriff small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £12 on the first Saturday in January, April, July and October. A police court sits when necessary. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Lim. as well as two savings banks. Two newspapers, viz.: the "Blairgowrie Advertiser" and the "Blairgowrie and Rattray Free Press," are published here on Saturday. Fairs are held here as follows: March, horses and cattle, 3rd Wednesday; May, feeing, 1st Wednesday; cattle &c. Tuesday before old Whit Sunday; July, cattle &c. (Fair o' Blair), Tuesday following fourth Monday of July; October, cattle, Wednesday before Falkirk tryst (Falkirk, 2nd Tuesday); November, feeing, 1st Wednesday; hiring and cattle, 23rd; weekly market, every Tuesday. In the vicinity are the remains of the Castle of Glasclune, a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about 2 miles from the town. Excellent trout and salmon fishing is obtainable in the Ericht, the Tay, the Isla and the burns of the Lunan and Lornty (all within a moderate distance of the town), and capital perch and pike fishing may be had in the several lochs in the neighbourhood. Mrs. McPherson, of Blairgowrie House, is the lady of the manor and the principal landowner. Craighall (the seat of Lieut.-Gen. James Clerk Rattray C.B., J.P., D.L.) is a romantic spot near here, open free on Tuesdays and Fridays. The civil parish has an area of 15,303 acres; rateable value, £27,049; the population in 1881 was 5,162, and in 1891, 4,739, of which the town possessed 3,714; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 1,644.

Rosemount is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 2 miles south of Blairgowrie and 2½ north-west of Coupar-Angus; in the neighbourhood is a saw mill.

Carsie is a hamlet in this parish, 2 miles from Blairgowrie, which is the nearest railway station. There is a saw mill and farina works.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, High street; Miss Jane M'Hardie, postmistress. Letters arrive at 6.50 a.m.; from the south at 9.10 a.m. & 6 p.m.; & are dispatched at 9.45 a.m. to all parts; 12 noon to Edinburgh, Dundee, Fifeshire & the North; 2.30 to all parts; 5.20 to the south & 11 p.m. to all parts. Post messengers are dispatched at 9.10 a.m. to Forneth, Kinloch, Clunie, Craigie, Rosemount & Carsie

BRACO (otherwise ARDOCH) is a village in Upper Strathearn poor law combination and in the small debt court division of Dunblane; the village is on the Knaikwater and the road from Dunblane to Crieff, 1½ miles north from Greenloaning station on the Dunblane and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south from Crieff. In the parish are the remains of a Roman camp, forming an oblong of 140 yards by 125 within the lines; the Prætorium, or "general's quarters," which is a regular square of twenty yards on each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven. Adjoining are two other encampments communicating with each other; various interesting relics recovered from these fortifications, including helmets, fragments of bridles, and other articles, preserved for a considerable time at the house of Ardoch, were carried off by soldiers in the Duke of Argyll's army after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715. Braco Castle is the seat of Sir William Renny Watson D.L., J.P. Capt. William H. Drummond-Moray is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. Ardoch parish, in which Braco village is situated, was erected in 1885 from the parishes of Blackford,Dunblane and Muthill. The church is about half a mile north-east of Braco. The area of the parish comprises 22,127 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1891 was 959, and in 1881, 1,102.

Greenloaning is a hamlet in this parish, 5 miles south-south-west from Muthill, with a station on the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway.

CALLANDER is a modern police burgh and a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Grampians, and is about 18 miles in length by a breadth of from 4 to 8 miles. The village is situated in a beautiful valley on both sides of the Teith, here crossed by a bridge of three arches, and is 52 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 south-west from Perth, 45 north from Glasgow, 16 north-west from Stirling and 8 north-west from Doune, with a station on the Dunblane, Callander and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway, and is completely sheltered on the north by a line of precipitous crags, 700 or 800 feet high, partly covered with wood. The streets are disposed on a regular plan and contain a number of buildings of some architectural merit. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water brought from Loch Lubnaig, which is in the parish, 3 miles north-east, and conveyed to the town by gravitation. By the adoption of the Police (Scotland) Act, 1862, the place was constituted a police burgh, and is now governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners, by whom an approved system of drainage has been carried out, the sewerage being conveyed to a meadow a mile distant and there utilised. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful; immediately above the village is a lovely spot formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnaig and Loch Vennacher,and unitedly forming the Teith. Two miles west of the village is the pass of Leny,which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Bracklyn is another fine point in the scenery and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs, about 9 miles from the village, is extremely fine. Callander is generally a most convenient centre for a number of excursions through scenery of every variety, but it owes its prosperity chiefly to the fame of the romantic scenery of the Trossachs, 9 miles distant, and reached during the season by coaches from the railway station; a great number of visitors and tourists come here during the summer. Loch Katrine,which is 9 miles long and nearly 1 broad,and at the east of which is Ellens Isle;Loch Voil, three quarters of a mile long and 500 yards wide, and Loch Vennacher, 4 miles long and 1 broad, are in the parish. From Loch Katrine the city of Glasgow obtains its supply of water, which is conveyed in a tunnel 6,975 feet long, through a range of mountains south of the Loch, to Loch Chin, thence in tunnels and aqueducts 26 miles long to Murdock reservoir, wherein is stored 500,000,000 gallons of water; it is then conveyed in double pipes to Glasgow. In the parish are four mountains, viz.:Ben Ledi, 2,875 feet;Stoba Chin 2,839; Ben Vane, 2,685; and Ben Aan, 1,800 feet in height. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The principal hotels are the Dreadnought,the Ancaster Arms, the Crown,and the Caledonian temperance hotel.There are four annual fairs, namely, on the third Thursday of March, May 16th, third Tuesday of July, and third Thursday of December. The Earl of Ancaster, the Earl of Moray, John B. Hamilton esq. J.P. of Leny, are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Callander has an area of 51,186 acres; rateable value, £24,325; the population in 1881 was 2,167, and in 1891, 2,279; of this number the village contained 1,538; the ecclesiastical population in 1891 was 2,012.

The Trossachs is the name given to a mountainous district in the western portion of the parish, containing some of the most magnificent lake and mountain scenery in all Scotland. It is a quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Aberfoyle, Callander and Port of Monteith. The Trossachs hotel here is an establishment well known to visitors and tourists; it is on the banks of Lake Achray.

The Bridge of Turk, made famous by the couplet:

"And when the Bridge of Turk was won,
The headmost horseman rode alone," is a small hamlet in this parish, and contains the ruins of a very large and handsome hotel, unfortunately burned down some time ago. The nearest railway station is at Callander, 6½ miles east. The population in 1891 was 371.

CALVINE, see BLAIR ATHOLL.

CAPUTH is an extensive parish and small village, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 31, 32, 40, 72 and 74, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Clunie, Collace, Dunkeld and Dowally, Kinloch, Kirkmichael and Kinnettles in Forfarshire and a part of Clunie added to Caputh. The village stands on the banks of the river Tay, and the road from Perth to Dunkeld, and is 5 miles east from Dunkeld, and 3 north from Murthly station on the Perth and Dunkeld section of the Highland railway. There are three small lakes in the parish, on the Lunan brook. Butterstone, Spittalfield and Meikleour are small villages in this parish, from 3 to 5½ miles distant. Sir Alexander Muir-Mackenzie bart. D.L. of Delvine, the Marquess of Lansdowne, and the Duke of Atholl K.T. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to alteration of the boundary was 19,489 acres; rateable value of present area, £12,629; the population in 1881 was 2,096, and in 1891, 1,179; ecclesiastical parish, 1,775.

CARGILL is a parish and village, in the vale of Strathmore, and in the poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; its extent from east to west is about 6 miles, and from north to south about 4 miles, and it is bounded on the south by Collace and Saint Martins, on the west by the river Tay, on the north by the river Isla and Coupar-Angus, and on the east by Coupar-Angus and Kettins. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" 52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, a part of Scone parish has been annexed to Cargill. The rivers Tay and Isla, flowing southwards, unite in this parish at a point a short distance north of the village, which is 4½ miles south-west from Coupar-Angus, and 9 miles from Perth, and has a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The parish church, erected in 1883, is a plain but substantial edifice. The Earl of Ancaster is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The parish is purely agricultural, the soil varying from a heavy clay to a light sandy loam; it has an area of 9,495 acres; rateable value, £12,390; the population in 1881 was 1,348, and in 1891, 1,318.

Burrelton is a village in this parish, adjoining Woodside, where is the nearest railway station, and is 2 miles south-west from Coupar-Angus.

Woodside is a village in this parish, 2 miles south-west from Coupar-Angus, on the main road from Coupar-Angus to Perth, with a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway.

Wolf Hill is a hamlet in this parish, 1½ miles from Cargill, the nearest railway station, and 6 miles from Coupar-Angus.

CARSIE, see BLAIRGOWRIE.

CLIFTON, see KILLIN.

CLUNIE is a parish and village, in the poor law combination of Logierait and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. The parish includes part of the lower range of the Grampians, which are barren, and covered with heather. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, part of Caputh parish has been transferred to this parish. The village is 5 miles west from Blairgowrie, where also is the nearest station on a branch from Coupar-Angus of the Caledonian railway. The loch of Clunie is one of the most beautiful of the smaller lakes in the country, is about one mile long by 800 yards wide and contains a small island, on which stands an ancient tower, the property of W. H. Cox, supposed to have been the birthplace, in 1561, of James Crichton, better known as the "Admirable Crichton," whose father, Sir Robert Crichton, Lord Advocate of Scotland, was then proprietor of the barony of Clunie. The tower is still in good repair, and partly furnished, though rarely occupied; but is open to strangers desirous of visiting it. Marlie loch is also in this parish. The parish has an area of 11,384 acres; rateable value, £6,603; the population in 1881 was 582, and in 1891, 579.

Forneth is a small and scattered village in this parish, 6 miles from Blairgowrie railway station and 8 from Dunkeld. Miss Speid is the principal landowner.

Post Office, Forneth; George Taggart, sub-postmaster. Letters through Blairgowrie arrive from all parts at 11.30 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 12.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Blairgowrie

COLLACE is a parish, surrounded by the parishes of Cargill, St. Martins, Kinnaird and Abernyte, and is 4 miles south from Woodside station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway and 8 north from Perth, and is in the small debt court district of Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 31, part of Caputh parish and of Kettins parish in Forfarshire have been transferred to this parish. The parish church is a Gothic structure with a square tower, erected in 1813. Freestone of good quality abounds in the parish. The hill of Dunsinane, 1,114 feet above the sea level, is in his parish. Upon this insulated site (rendered famous by Shakspere), Macbeth, the Thane of Glamis, in 1043, erected a strong and lofty castle, keeping the surrounding country in subjection. In 1054 an overwhelming force under Siward, Earl of Northumberland, and supported by Edward the Confessor, the reigning King of England, marched upon the stronghold on behalf of Malcolm III. son of King Duncan, whom Macbeth had previously murdered. Being observed from the battlements, Macbeth fled northwards, but was pursued and slain, according to tradition, at Lumphannan, in Aberdeenshire, in 1056 or 1057. The fortress was razed to the ground. Colonel Sir Alexander Moncrieff K.C.B., J.P. of Bandirran, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 2,937 acres; rateable value, £3,500; the population in 1891 was 419.

Kinrossie is a small village in the parish of Collace.

COMRIE is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination and small debt court district of Crieff, and village, which has a terminal station on a branch from Crieff of the Caledonian line, is 58 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Perth and 6½ west from Crieff, and is in a beautiful and romantic valley at the foot of the Grampians, and on the north bank of the Earn, at the junction of the Lednock. Loch Earn, 7 miles long and nearly 1½ broad, lies at the western extremity of the parish, and from it flows the beautiful Earn, along which there is a public road through the valley of Strathearn. Ben Vorlich Mountain, 3,224 feet high, is in this parish. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of Monzievaird and Strowan parish, with a population of 27, and Muthill parish, with 35, have been annexed to this parish. Fairs are held (St. Kessac's) on the 22nd of March and 4th of December for cattle. In the neighbourhood are vestiges of Roman encampments, on the plains of Dalginross, where it is said the Roman general Agricola fought the Caledonians under Galgacus; there are likewise several Druidical circles, and a monument of granite, 72 feet high, erected in 1815, to Henry Dundas, 1st Viscount Melville (d. 1811). There is also another memorial, formed of the same material, 80 feet high, to General the Right Hon. Sir David Baird K.C.B., P.C. a distinguished military commander (d. 1829). Glenartney Lodge is the residence of the Earl of Ancaster P.C., J.P., D.L.; Dunira, of Sir Sidney J. Dundas bart.; Aberuchill Castle, of James A. Allan esq. and Drunearn House, of Alexander Muirhead Aitken esq. The Earl of Ancaster P.C. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Comrie civil parish has an area of 60,593 acres; rateable value, £17,384 6s. 5d.; the population in 1881 was 1,858, and in 1891, 1,591; of this number the village had 870; the population of the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Comrie, Monzievaird and Strowan and Muthill, in 1891 was 1,517.

Saint Fillans is a small hamlet in this parish, 5½ miles west-north-west from the village of Comrie, its nearest railway station, 12 miles from Crieff, pleasantly seated at the foot of Loch Earn, where boats are kept for fishing parties or other visitors attracted hither by the delightful scenery of this district. There is an excellent inn, affording every accommodation to gentlemen during the fishing and shooting season.

COUPAR-ANGUS.

COUPAR-ANGUS is a police burgh and market town and parish, in the poor law combination of Perth and small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts. There is a branch of the Caledonian railway from Coupar to Blairgowrie. The town is 15 miles north-west from Dundee, 12¾ east-by-north from Perth and 4¾ south-south-east from Blairgowrie. The parish of Coupar-Angus, which is near the base of the Sidlaw Hills, extends 5 miles along the east bank of the river Isla, varying from one to two miles in breadth; the surface, arable and meadow land, is well cultivated and enclosed. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 92, that part of Coupar-Angus formerly in Forfarshire, with a population of 273, has been transferred to this county for civil purposes, but remains in Forfar for parliamentary purposes. The town is governed by a police commission, consisting of chief magistrate, two junior magistrates and six commissioners, and is well built and lighted with gas, and within recent years considerable improvements have been made. The sanitary condition is very good, a new drainage system having been introduced in 1885 and completed in 1887, at a cost of about £4,500. The Police Commissioners are the local authority for sanitary affairs, and under their auspices the town is plentifully supplied with good water from the estate of Pitcur, about two miles south from Coupar-Angus. The old parish church was an ancient building, and so far decayed as to necessitate its being taken down; a larger and more elaborate edifice in the Gothic style, has been erected on the site: the church has a large graveyard around it, in which are several old tombs and monuments. There is also a Free church, an Episcopal church, United Presbyterian church, Evangelical Union church and an Original Secession church. A new board school was erected in 1876, with accommodation for upwards of 500 scholars. A Town Hall, a substantial building in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Mr. James Smart, of Perth, was opened in August, 1887, the cost, about £3,500, being defrayed by public subscription; the public hall is 64 feet in length by 38 feet in breadth, and is capable of seating 600 persons; there are also reading and other rooms and a commissioners' hall. The venerable steeple in Queen street is used as a clock tower. The street formerly called Abbey street is now Queen street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her Majesty passing through Coupar-Angus in 1849. The market day is Thursday, and a fair is held on the third Thursday in March for cattle and horses. There are two linen factories and a preserve works. There are three banking establishments, viz. branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Royal is the principal hotel. In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1164, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch; at the Reformation, this edifice, which was of considerable magnitude, was destroyed by a mob from Perth: the remains occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. Edward Collins-Wood esq. of Keithick, is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. Coupar-Angus civil parish has an area of 4,699 acres; rateable value, £16,354; in 1881 the population was 2,816, and in 1891, 2,760, of which the burgh contained 2,106 and the ecclesiastical parish, 2,343.

CRIEFF.

CRIEFF is a market town and police burgh under the "General Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is a parish in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination; a sheriff small debt court is held quarterly on the first Saturday in March, June, September and December. The town has a railway station on the Caledonian line and is 22 miles south from Stirling, 17 west from Perth and 6½ east from Comrie, in Upper Strathearn, one of the most delightful districts in Scotland, on the declivity of a hill, on the southern range of the Grampians,having the Earn and several streams at the foot, backed by hills, craigs, and the Knock of Crieff, all of a considerable altitude—the outposts of the ancient Grampians. Upper Strathearn occupies the mouth of several important passes, the Sma' Glen being the place where the Romans had a station, and where tradition lays the bones of Ossian, and points to a fragment of his displaced tombstone. It proceeds into the highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich, soft vales on the other. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Fowlis-Wester, a part with 12 to Muthill, and a part to Monzie and Strowan, without population, and by the same Act, by boundary order 98, a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 134, added to Crieff. The town is governed by a police commission consisting of provost, two bailies and nine commissioners. The places of worship are St. Michael's and West Parish churches, the former an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, surmounted on the south-west side by a tower,a Free church,and others for United Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics and Baptists. Morrison's Academy was endowed by the late Thomas Morrison, builder, Edinburgh, who bequeathed about £20,000 for this purpose, and the trustees purchased the site on which the academy is erected, which is conducted by a rector and staff of assistants. A complete education is given to the sons and daughters of the middle classes, the departments being separate. A wing has been erected at the east end for the rector and for boarders. Taylor's Institution was founded and endowed by William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, and left his whole fortune "for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education," but is now a board school and has no endowment. From funds left by the same benefactor, a Free Library and Reading Room was opened in 1891, and contains upwards of 2,000 volumes. The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and fairs are held on the first Tuesday in each month. There is a distillery and a preserve works in the town. In 1893 a fountain was erected in James square, from designs by Messrs. Mossman & Co. of Glasgow; it is 26 feet in height and 17 at the base, and built of grey granite, relieved with red granite columns with Corinthian capitals, the whole surmounted by four dolphins. The expense of over £500 was subscribed by the inhabitants to commemorate the coming of age of Mr. William Keith Murray, of Ochtertyre, and in recognition of the gift of a water supply to the town by his father, Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart. The crest of the Ochtertyre family and that of the burgh appear on different sides.

Crieff is a thriving and increasing town, deriving no small advantage from the resort in the summer months of invalids and others, who are attracted by the beauty of the scenery; villas for the better class of summer visitors have been built. Crieff has for a century been lauded as the Montpelier of Scotland, and its salubrity of air and beauty of scenery go far to entitle it to this appellation. The Strathearn Hydropathic Establishment, erected in 1867 at a cost of nearly£30,000,occupies a splendid site in front of the Knock, and overlooks an extensive landscape of varied beauty. Water of the finest quality is supplied at the rate of 20,000 gallons per day. There is accommodation for about 250 visitors.

The Old Drummond Arms, in which Prince Charles Edward Stuart passed a night in 1745, was feud by the trustees of the late Lady Willoughby de Eresby to the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and premises for the bank and a large hotel have been erected. These buildings are among the most handsome in the town. In the town are six branch banks and a savings bank. There are two newspapers published here, the "Crieff Journal," on Friday, and the "Strathearn Herald," on Saturday. The Earl of Ancaster P.C. is the principal landowner and lord of the manor.

The civil parish contained, previous to the alteration of the boundary, 20,385 acres; rateable value of present area, £37,983 14s.; in 1881 the population was 4,852, and in 1891, 5,305, and in the burgh, 4,902; in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,955.

Innerpeffray is a scattered village in the parish of Crieff, 3½ miles south-east, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here is a Library, founded in 1691, by David Drummond, third Lord Madderty, and containing about 3,000 volumes, principally of a theological and classical nature, for the use of students. The old castle and church, built in the 16th century by Lord Madderty, are now in ruins, and he himself was buried in the family burial place within the chapel in 1519.

CULROSS was, by an order of the Boundary Commissioners, dated Feb. 23rd, 1891, transferred to Fifeshire, which see.

DALGUISE, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

DEANSTON, see KILMADOCK.

DOUNE is a village and police burgh in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, and poor combination of Upper Strathearn, and has a station on the Dunblane, Doune and Callander section of the Caledonian railway; it is 44 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 31½ south-west from Perth, 19 south-south-west from Crieff, 9 north-west from Stirling, 8 south-east from Callander and 4 west from Dunblane. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands. The old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the castle was erected by Robert Spital, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune as tailor to Princess Margaret of England, widow of James IV.; this bridge was widened by three feet in 1866. In 1822 the parish church with a handsome tower was erected, in the Gothic style, and contains a beautiful pulpit; it was built by the Earl of Moray, the chief heritor of the parish, and owner of Doune Castle. In 1867 a Free church was built to replace one erected in 1843. There is also a church belonging to the Episcopal body, and about midway between Doune and Deanston there is a United Presbyterian church. In October, 1875, a Roman Catholic church was built at a cost of about £3,300, seating 300. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November. Doune was formerly noted for its manufacture of Highland pistols, but this business has long become extinct. There are branches of the United Bank of Scotland Limited, and Royal Bank of Scotland. Doune Castle was formerly the family seat of the Earls of Monteith, and the ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood of Doune, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-class order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbarton afford entire specimens; the castle buildings form a large quadrangle, the hall and domestic apartments occupying the front, north side and about half the west side; the remainder surrounding the court yard has a wall 37 feet high and 7 feet thick, with a tower 80 feet in height: this building has during the last few years been partially restored by the Earl of Moray, the hereditary keeper thereof; a considerable portion has been roofed in, and part of the interior, notably the baronial hall, has been restored to its original condition: the outer walls and battlements have also been repaired so as to show the original structure and extent of the edifice: the whole restoration involved an outlay of several thousand pounds: James II. of Scotland, when an infant, was an inmate; it formed part of the dowry of Margaret of Denmark, Queen of James III. and also of Margaret Tudor, Queen of James IV. who resided sometimes in the castle: Mary Queen of Scots resided here occasionally, and her son James VI. made frequent visits to the castle: the last historical episode in which Doune Castle was connected, was during the rebellion of 1745-46, when it was garrisoned by the adherents of Prince Charles Edward. The population of the burgh in 1891 was 940.

DRON is a parish, 5 miles south from Perth, in the south-western extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathearn, and is divided from Abernethy on the east by the rivulet Farg. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower parts the land is flat and fertile, being a portion of the rich carse of the Earn. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of Dunbarney parish without population has been annexed to Dron. The Glenfarg railway is one of the links the North British Railway Co. have constructed in connection with the Forth Bridge, to accelerate their traffic between the south and north of that bridge. It passes through the parish of Dron, and has its junction with the North British line at Bridge of Earn, about a mile north from Dron church. The church, a Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south. This parish has an area of 4,188 acres; rateable value, £3,404; the population in 1881 was 335, and in 1891, 298.

DULL is a large parish, in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination, and is 30 miles long by a breadth of about 12. The river Tummel bounds the district on the north, and the Lyon and Tay on the south, which rivers abound with excellent salmon, and the lakes (of which there are fifteen, of large and small dimensions) contain fine trout, pike and eels. The military road from Stirling to Inverness passes through the entire length of the parish. The mountain Schiehallion, which rises upwards of 3,500 feet, is seen on the northern border, with its brow shrouded in mist. The village is about 4 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station, on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 23 north from Crieff and 20 north-west from Dunkeld, and was at one time the seat of a Roman Catholic college, of which no traces now remain. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dull parish has been added to the parishes of Blair Atholl, with 167 population, Logie, with 370, and Weem, with 156, and by boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Fortingall, with a population of 51, Kenmore, with 47, Logierait, with 583, and Weem, with 81, have been added to Dull. Sir Robert Menzies bart. D.L., J.P. of Castle Menzies, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 63,417 acres; rateable value of the present area, £18,553; the population of the civil parish in 1881 was 2,565, and in 1891, 2,462, and of the ecclesiastical, 1,584.

Foss is a quoad sacra parish in Dull civil parish. The population in 1891 was 210.

DUNBARNEY parish is in the south-eastern part of the county, occupying a rich portion of the Lower Strathearn district, about 1½ miles south from Perth; it is bounded by the hill of Moredun (or Moncreiffe) on the north, and on the west by Forgandenny, and is intersected by the river Earn in various windings; the flat and rising grounds being adorned with plantations. The Earn is crossed in this parish by a bridge, giving its name to the village mentioned below. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of this parish, without population, has been transferred to Dron parish. In the neighbourhood are some interesting and attractive objects, the most remarkable of which are the remains of a Pictish camp on the summit of Moredun. Moncrieffe House, the seat of Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion, the grounds of which are very extensive, and beautifully wooded, and present a refreshing contrast to other parts of the district. The scenery around is beautiful and romantic. Kilgraston is the residence of Patrick Grant esq. The principal landowners are Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. and Patrick Grant esq. This parish has an area of 4,060 acres; rateable value, £7,280; in 1881 the population was 756, and in 1891, 829.

Bridge of Earn is a village in this parish, about 3½ miles south from Perth. This village, which has of late years become a great place of resort on account of the celebrity of its mineral spring, is on the great north road, and has a station on the North British railway connecting Perth with Edinburgh and Glasgow. A junction is effected here between the Glenfarg railway and the Fife section of the North British line. Pitkeathly Wells are 1½ miles from the village, the waters having long been celebrated for affording relief to those afflicted with gravel, scurvy &c. Population in 1881, 304, and in 1891, 298.

The parish also contains the village of Kintillo, where in the reign of Alexander III. the king held a court for testing the national weights and measures.

DUNBLANE is a small ancient city, police burgh and parish, in Stirling poor combination and is on the banks of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and contains trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finely ornamented with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Stirling is justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which flows the river Allan, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the land approaches the hills it is of the character of moor, although excellently adapted for pasture, the dairy produce of this district being in high repute. At the lower end of the town is the romantic walk of Kippenross, near to the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland. the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly 20 feet, where the branches separate fully 27 feet, and close to the ground 42 feet 7 inches. The height of the tree is 100 feet, and has attained the age, it is said, of over 470 years. Sheriff Muir, a mountain 1,715 feet high, is in this parish. The Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway passes through and has a station here, and the Dunblane, Doune and Callander branch commences in the town, which is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, and is 41 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 33 north-east from Glasgow, 28 south-west from Perth and 11 south-east from Callander. The town is governed, under the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892" by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts and for ordinary business is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court house and prison are modern buildings. The town adjoining the church, from its being composed chiefly of old houses, exhibits the appearance of what is termed the "Close," or the precincts of the cathedral. The good and learned Robert Leighton, Bishop of Dunblane (1661-74), bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese. The books are kept in a suitable building called the Leighton Library, to which the public have access on easy terms. The see of Dunblane was founded, it is believed, by King David I. in 1140, although St. Blane, a contemporary of St. Columba, is affirmed to have been bishop, or prior of a monastery here as early as A.D. 600; this institution was afterwards occupied by the Culdees, and it was during their occupation that the establishment of the diocese by King David was carried out. After the Revolution the see was abolished, but was revived in 1731; in 1808 it was united to the temporary see of Fife, and is now held with St. Andrews. The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Blane, stands on the bank of Allan Water: it dates from about 1230-50, and is a graceful example of Early English and Decorated work, with the exception of the tower, 128 feet in height, which stands partly within and partly without the south aisle and obliquely to the line of the aisle; the first four stages of this tower are Norman (c. 1100-10) and belong to the church reared by David I.; the two upper stages date from the 16th century, and the embattled parapet was added by Bishop William Chisholm II. (1564-75); from within it rises a short octagonal spire with vane, and there is one bell, dated 1612: the cathedral, as now existing, consists of a choir of six bays, with a vaulted north aisle of five bays, and a long chamber over it, used partly as an organ loft, and nave of eight bays with aisles, the easternmost bays of which have gables, and appear like small transepts; there is no triforium, but the clerestory has an elegant traceried double arcading, with a passage way between, which is continued through the three similarly designed and graceful lights in the west front: the west doorway is recessed in five orders, and flanked by smaller blind arches, and in the western gable is a vesica window which has been specially noticed by Mr. Ruskin: the east window of the choir is of four lights, with geometric tracery in the head, and is curiously flanked by two narrow lancets of lesser height. Towards the close of the 16th century, the nave was allowed to become ruinous, and the choir alone was used for divine service, but this, at a later date, was much disfigured by the erection of galleries, one of which was built across the east window; in 1818 the galleries were for the most part removed, and an attempt was made to renew the tracery of the choir windows, but the complete restoration of the building was not effected till 1892-3, when, chiefly owing to the munificence of Mrs. Wallace, of Glassingall, the nave, so far as necessary, was rebuilt, all the old work being scrupulously respected, and the fabric generally renovated, at a cost of £25,000, under the direction of R. R. Anderson esq. LL.D. architect, of Edinburgh, and it was reopened 28 Oct. 1893, by the Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. when a special dedicatory service was held. Although much of the ancient woodwork is lost, the choir retains some richly carved canopied oak stalls, and has now a new open traceried screen of carved oak with panelled base, in a combination of the Gothic and Renaissance styles; the new pulpit, correspondingly designed, is octagonal, and has figures at the angles, under canopies, and there is a brass lectern; the nave has now a wagon roof of dark oak, the ribs of which are relieved by emblazoned shields. On the north side of the choir, within a recessed arch, is the altar tomb, with effigy, of Bishop Clement (1233-58), to whom the erection of the cathedral is chiefly due; there is also an effigy, under a triangular recess, of Bishop Ochiltree (1430-48); figures of Malise, 5th Earl of Stratherne, and his wife, ob. 1271, carved out of a monolith of gritstone, and an arched tomb of Italian design, said to have belonged to the Drummonds, of Strathallan, to whom there are also some ledgers, now despoiled of their brasses, on the choir floor; in the north aisle stands a Celtic cross. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 226 feet, width of nave 67 feet, and of the choir 57 feet. The other places of worship are a Free church, a United Presbyterian, an Episcopal church, and one for Roman Catholics.

There are two public schools, and one belonging to the Episcopal church. Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures. Worsted spinning is carried on very extensively by Messrs. Alexander Wilson & Co. at their mills, Springbank, which give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There is also a small mill for the manufacture of woollen cloth, and others for wool spinning in the parish. In High street are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The city is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring in the vicinity, on the property of Captain the Hon. Arthur Hay-Drummond R.N. of Cromlix. A market was held formerly; also numerous fairs, but they have all fallen into disuse. A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe conflict took place in November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyll, and the army of the Pretender James, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of the hill are some large stones inclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived in Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the Low Country, and remained a night at the house of the Laird of Balhaldie. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is shown to visitors. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. About half way between Dunblane and the Bridge of Allan is Keir House, the residence of Archibald Stirling esq. D.L.; the grounds are laid out with great taste, and contain fine specimens of forest trees and ornamental flower gardens; they are thrown open to visitors from 2 until 5 on Friday. Kilbryde Castle is the residence of Sir James Campbell bart. J.P.; Kippen Davie, of Col. Patrick Stirling D.L., J.P. and Cromlix, of Capt. the Hon. Arthur Hay-Drummond R.N., D.L., J.P. Lieut.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L. of Blair Drummond, is the principal landowner. Dunblane parish had an area of 18,543 acres before the reconstruction of the boundary; rateable value, £26,519; the population in 1881 was 3,123, and in 1891, 3,220, of which the town numbered 2,186.

On the river Allan, about 2 miles north of Dunblane, has been erected the small village of Ashfield, where are situated extensive works belonging to the well-known firm of Messrs. Robert Pullar and Sons, calico printers &c.

DUNKELD AND DOWALLY.

DUNKELD and DOWALLY form a united parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dunkeld and Dowally, with 74 persons, added to Logierait, and by Boundary Orders 73 and 74, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 489, has been transferred to Dunkeld and Dowally.

Dunkeld is a small town and burgh of barony, with a station on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and is 57 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh (by rail 60), 24 east from Kenmore, 15 north-north-west from Perth and 12 west from Blairgowrie; delightfully situated in an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the Highlands and Lowlands appear to meet, and where the Tay (here spanned by a fine bridge of seven arches, with a total span of 685 feet, completed in 1809 from the plans of Telford, the famous engineer, at a cost of upwards of £30,000) first escapes from its mountain fastnesses and contributes so much additional fertility and beauty. The scenery around Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration, and the town the resort of tourists. Dunkeld is a burgh of barony, and as such is governed by a baron bailie, who is appointed by the Duke of Atholl. A justice of the peace court is held for granting publicans' certificates, game dealers' licences &c. The town is of great antiquity and was the capital of ancient Caledonia. The see of Dunkeld may be said to have taken its rise from the Culdee monastery, founded here in or previous to the 9th century by monks from Iona, who also translated hither the relics of St. Columba, and preserved them here until their final transmission to Ireland: there are records of bishops from A.D. 849, and they then held precedence over all others in Scotland, a privilege continued to the prelates of Dunkeld until the creation of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews in 1470. In 1127, King David I. reconstituted the abbey as a house of canons regular, and appointed Gregory, then abbot, as bishop of Dunkeld, while retaining at the same time his monastic office; the abbey church of St. Columba naturally became the cathedral, and though now for the most part ruinous, it is yet a very stately structure, and its attractiveness is much enhanced by the beauty of its situation amid a grove of trees within the private demesne of the Duke of Atholl, and close to the river Tay: it consists of a long aisleless choir of four bays, with a vaulted chapter house of two bays on the north side, nave of seven bays with aisles and south porch, a tall octagonal stair turret on the south side of the west doorway, and a north-west tower completed in 1501, 25 feet square and 96 feet in height, with an open quatrefoiled parapet, angle turret and dwarf pinnacles; the total length, measured externally, is 240 feet, the width of the choir being 39 feet and of the nave and aisles 67 feet: the earliest existing portion of the fabric is the south wall of the choir, c. 1220-50; the rest of the choir is of later date and was the work of Bishop Sinclair in the first half of the 14th century; the chapter house, begun in 1457, was finished in 1469, and has an upper chamber or muniment room; in 1380 the church was burnt by the English, and probably on account of the damage thus caused, the nave was rebuilt as it now stands, during the period 1436-47; the arcades have massive but short circular piers with plain caps. carrying boldly molded arches; the triforium openings consist in each case of a single semi-circular arch divided into two pointed arches; the clerestory is lighted by simply pointed windows with cusped tracery, but their interior splay is rudely plain; the great west window, singularly placed off the centre both of the gable and the entrance, still retains some fragments of its once elaborate traceried work; in the aisles the tracery of some of the windows is still perfect; the western doorway has its outer arch carried on square piers splayed at the base, and has within six orders of shafts and mouldings; on either side of it is a blind arch slightly recessed: in 1599 the cathedral again suffered great damage, the rood screen, stalls and many monuments being destroyed; after this the services were held only in the choir, the nave being dismantled and allowed to become ruinous: in 1689, after the battle of Killiecrankie, the victorious Highlanders attacked Dunkeld, and the cathedral, into which the troops of William III. had thrown themselves, was severely injured by fire and in other ways; but the choir was repaired by the Murrays in 1691 and again in 1762 by the Government at a cost of £300, and was rebuilt in 1820 by the Duke of Athole at a cost of £5,000: the chapter house, now serving only as a vestibule to the ducal pew, contains a mural monument of the 17th century, and on the south side another in the Renaissance style displaying heraldically all the principal alliances of the Stewart-Murrays, dukes of Athole, and on the east side is a statue of John, 4th Duke K.T., F.R.S. who died 29 Sept. 1830, and is buried here; in the south-east angle of the choir is the fine tomb with recumbent effigy of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of King Robert II. and commonly known from his rapacious character as "the wolf of Badenoch," d. 24 July, 1394; beside it lies the headless effigy of Bishop Sinclair (1309-24), and here also stands part of a Celtic cross; on the opposite side are stairs leading to a gallery which extends along that side, and there are sedilia on both sides, but the east end of the choir is now partitioned off and merely serves as a vestibule to the remaining part: the south aisle of the nave, originally vaulted, contains the tomb with recumbent effigy of Bishop de Cardeny (1407-36); the front of the tomb is ornamented with figures of angels under canopies and holding shields, and over it is a low but much enriched recessed arch with elaborately carved crockets and finial; there is a piscina at the east end of this wall; the area of the nave has long been used as a cemetery, and the base of the tower, which is vaulted, is used as a tool house. There is also a Free church, a substantial edifice, erected in 1874, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, on the site of the old one, with tower and spire: the interior is ornamented by a stained glass window in memory of the Earl of Dalhousie, the whole of the funds being raised by public subscription. James VI. made a grant for erecting a grammar school, called the Royal School of Dunkeld, which still exists. There is also a school for the females, a handsome building in the Market place erected by the Duchess of Athole in 1825, at a cost of £1,200. The City Hall, in Atholl street, is a stone building furnished with a gallery, and capable of holding 350 persons; the funds were raised by the assistance of the present Duke of Atholl, the gentry in the neighbourhood and the inhabitants. The weekly market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the 14th of February and the 5th of April; should any of these fall on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fairs take place on the following Tuesday; another is held on the second Tuesday in November. The manufacture of linen goods was formerly the staple trade of Dunkeld, but has now become extinct. There are branches of two banking establishments settled here, namely, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Excellent accommodation is furnished by two very extensive and superior hotels, the Duke of Atholl's Arms and the Royal Hotel. A fountain was erected in 1866 as a mark of respect and esteem to George Augustus Frederick John, sixth Duke of Athole, who died in 1864. Dunkeld House is a seat of the noble family of Stewart-Murray, Dukes of Atholl, the gardens and extensive pleasure grounds belonging to which are most attractive: among these Ossian's Hall, the Rumbling Bridge and several falls of the river Bran, are pointed out to the visitor: in these grounds are two very fine trees called "the mother larches," being the first grown in Britain; they were planted in 1737 and are 100 feet high, one of them measuring 15 feet in circumference at three feet from the ground. His Grace the Duke of Atholl is the principal landowner. The population in 1881 was 768, and in 1891, 613.

DOWALLY is a large parish, united with that of Dunkeld, 1 mile south from Guay station (which is in the parish) on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and about 5 miles north from Dunkeld. The present church was built in 1818, nearly on the site of that erected by Bishop Brown. A number of old stones have been made use of in constructing the new building, amongst which is one bearing the arms of Bishop Brown, the original founder, a tombstone to the memory of one of the Dalguise family, and a stone in the shape of a bell. The Duke of Atholl is the landowner. Kindallachan is a small village in this parish. Acreage of the joint parishes, 9,456; rateable value, £5,698; population in 1881, 791, and in 1891, 1,074.

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellative, is an extensive parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, on the west or right bank of the Tay, near the confluence of the Bran with that river. The parish of Little Dunkeld is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness, and by the Highland railway, which intersects the parish throughout its entire length, about 14 miles. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Fowlis Wester parish has been added to Little Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into four districts. Birnam, Dalguise, Gillyrurn, Inver, Meikle Trochry, Murthly, Drumour, Strathbraan and Torwood are small villages in the parish of Little Dunkeld, from one to six miles distant. The first district is that of Murthly, extending from Kinclaven to the "Pass of Birnam." It includes the villages of Gillyburn and Murthly, where there is a station on the Highland railway, about 15 miles north from Perth. The Perth District Asylum, adjoining the station, is a fine square building, surrounded by beautiful grounds, which are kept in order by the patients. Pinel Lodge Convalescent House, in connection with the asylum, was opened in November, 1895. The grand features of this part of the parish are the extensive and exquisite grounds of Murthly Castle, the seat of Walter Thomas James Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham esq. D.L., J.P. a fine structure in the Elizabethan style; the grounds being upwards of three square miles in extent, and contain avenues and terraces of the finest and rarest trees in the country. Besides Murthly Castle, this district contains Birnam Hall, and the charming shooting lodge of Rohallion, one of the most romantically-situated in Perthshire. The soil of this district (all of which belongs to W. T. J. Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham esq.) is fertile and well cultivated; the surface of the country is beautifully varied, and the fields well enclosed. The second and central district of the parish is Birnam, in the midst of which Birnam Hill, rendered classic by Shakespeare in drama, and by Sir John Everett Millais bart. P.R.A. in art, rises in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. From the summit of Birnam Hill an unrivalled view is obtained in every direction, and its slate quarries have been wrought with profit from an early period. At the base of the hill are the villages of Torwood and Birnam, while about a mile to the west is the village of Inver, the birthplace of the famous Scottish musician, Neil Gow (1727), pleasantly situated at the confluence of the rivers Tay and Braan. Acreage of the parish, 41,268; rateable value, £20,186; population in 1881, 2,175, and in 1891, 2,108; ecclesiastical, 1,906.

Birnam is a beautiful modern village, about three-quarters of a mile from Dunkeld, and is well drained and supplied with gas and water. Dunkeld station of the Highland railway is in Birnam. The Birnam Hotel, of which Mr. Edward Cesari is the proprietor, is the principal building, is in the Saxon-Gothic style, with towers, and contains a public hall, and is surrounded with pleasure grounds. One of the features of Birnam is the Institute, which includes a reading room and library, recreation and refreshment rooms, public hall and other accommodation. The Institute grounds are furnished with seats under the shade of spreading beeches. The Episcopal church (St. Mary) is a building in the Gothic style with tower and bell. In the immediate vicinity of Birnam there are a number of handsome mansions, conspicuous among which are St. Mary's Tower, the seat of the Duke of Rutland; and Erigmore, the residence of the Right Rev. George Howard Wilkinson D.D. Bishop of St. Andrews. Birnam is the centre of some of the most charming walks and drives in Perthshire, and is a favourite summer health resort. The population of Birnam village in 1891 was 494.

The third district of the parish of Little Dunkeld extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay, to Grandtully, a space of ten miles; here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. It includes a stretch of fine country called "The Bishopric," and contains the village of Dalguise, where there is a station of the Highland railway, and near which are the mansions of Dalguise House and Kinnaird.

Balnaguard is a village with an inn at the extreme end of the district.

The fourth district is Strathbraan, a valley about 9 miles in length, through which flows the river Braan. In the lower portion the soil is fertile and well tilled, but the upper portion is poor and unproductive. In this strath is Drumour Lodge; the shootings attached are very extensive.

Near the centre of Strathbraan is the village of Trochry, containing a Free church and the ruins of a famous old castle, once a seat of the Earls of Gowrie. At the upper extremity of the parish lies the village of Amulree (which see).

DUNNING is a rather extensive parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village is near the centre of the parish, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), and on the road from Stirling to Perth, is half a mile north of the base of the Ochil range of hills, and about 2 south from the river Earn, with a station on the Crieff Junction and Perth section of the Caledonian line, and is 9 miles south-west from Perth and 5 east from Auchterarder. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 12, a part of Auchterarder, without population, has been transferred to Dunning. This place was destroyed by fire in 1715, by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. A thorn, planted at that time in the centre of the ruins, is still to be seen. It is recorded that at the conflagration of the village only one house escaped (which is still standing), and that by an ingenious device on the part of its owner, a female, who, while the rest of the cottages were in flames, threw parcels of wet straw and any refuse of flax on the fire within the house, which raised such a smoke round this particular dwelling that, believing it to be in a fair way of demolition, the soldiers did not molest it. The steeple of the parish church is of very ancient date, and is supposed to be of Pictish origin. A corn market is held on Wednesday. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited is in the village. Duncrub Park, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Rollo D.L. who is the principal landowner and lord of the manor, is situated here. Keltv Castle, the residence of the Hon. Bernard Francis Rollo, and Garvock House, the residence of Col. Conyngham M'Alpine, are in this parish. The civil parish comprises 14,855 acres; rateable value, £12,235; the population in 1881 was 1,635, and in 1891, 1,345; and 1,345 in the ecclesiastical, and 838 in the village.

ERROL is a parish in the Carse of Gowrie, 5½ miles in length and nearly 3 in breadth, stretching across the Carse from the foot of the hills to the banks of the Firth of Tay. The soil is rich and fertile and under most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees, and is intersected with small tracts of water called "pows," collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. As the tide and current in the Tay were making great encroachments, the proprietors of the land found it necessary to build strong walls. The village, which is lighted with gas, has a station about one mile north on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway, and is 10 miles east from Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth. The parish church is a handsome building, on a commanding site, the tower of which may be seen at a considerable distance. There is also a substantial and capacious Free church, and one for United Presbyterians. Megginch Castle is the residence of Captain Malcolm Drummond J.P., D.L.; Errol Park, of Sir William Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. D.L., J.P. and Murie House, of John B. Broun-Morrison esq. D.L., J.P. Acreage of the parish, 9,507; population in 1881, 2,421, and in 1891, 2,158, of which the village contained 741.

FORNETH, see CLUNIE.

FORTEVIOT is a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Perth, and has a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 7 miles south-west from Perth, in the district of Strathearn and the greater portion in the vale of the Earn, the river of that name passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle, the seat of the Earl of Kinnoull. The river May winds through the verdant knolls of the Ochils, and thence through the picturesque grounds of Invermay, flowing on and forming several beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Humble Bumble, a cataract at Muckersie Linn, that has a 30 feet perpendicular fall into a romantic glen. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 39, a part of Forgandenny parish, with a population of 127, has been transferred to Forteviot. The village of Forteviot, which is on the right bank of the river Earn, is an ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, but nothing now remains to mark a royal seat. At Bankhead, near Dupplin Castle, an ancient cross may be seen, and one also on the opposite height of Dronochy, both of which are supposed to mark the approaches to Hally Hill, where, in the time of Charles I. vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights here the battle of Dupplin was fought in 1332, between the Scotch under the Earl of Mar and Edward Balliol, when the former were defeated, after which Balliol was crowned king of Scotland. The Earl of Kinnoull is the principal landowner. The parish has an area of 7,785 acres; rateable value, £6,534; the population in 1881 was 618, and in 1891, 538.

FORTINGALL is a parish, in the district of Breadalbane, and Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. The village is small, on the left bank of the river Lyon, about 3 miles from its junction with the Tay, and is about 10 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway, 84 north-west from Edinburgh and 42 north-west from Perth. The parish lies in the midst of the Grampians, and the land is only useful for pasture. Including the abolished parish of Kilchonan, it extends 37 miles in length by 17 in breadth, occupying a large tract of Highland territory in the north-west part of the county. The district abounds in lakes, rivers and woods, the chief of the former being Loch Rannoch, about 11 miles in length and 1 in breadth, whose banks are finely wooded; the next largest in size is Lydoch, about 6 miles long. In this district rises Schehallion, 3,547 feet high, one of the highest mountains in Scotland, where Dr. Nevil Maskelyne (1732-1811), astronomer royal, some years ago made his observations on the powers of attraction; other mountains in the parish are Ben Creachan 3,540, Ben Achallader 3,399 feet, Carn Mairg 3,419 feet, Ben Vennoch 3,125 feet, Creag Mhor 3,305 feet, Meall Phull 2,882 feet, Ben Pharlagani 2,886 feet, Ben Mholach 2,758 feet and Carn Dearg 3,084 feet. This parish is so wild and mountainous that prior to the year 1745 it was the resort of the freebooter, who laid the country under that species of contribution well known as "black-mail." A yew tree in the burial ground is said to be upwards of 2,500 years old. There are the remains of a Roman camp on the Haugh of Fortingall. Fairs are held in the village in December. Garth is the seat of Sir Donald Currie K.C.M.G., M.P., D.L.; Chesthill is the residence of Major William James B. Stewart-Menzies J.P. and Invervar Lodge, of the Hon. Mrs. Stewart-Menzies. Sir Donald Currie K.C.M.G., M.P., D.L. and Major Stewart-Menzies are the principal landowners. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Fortingall parish with a population of 51 has been added to that of Dull, and parts of the parishes of Kenmore, without population; Logierait with 121, and Weem with 51 population, transferred to Fortingall. The area of the civil parish is 196,683 acres; rateable value, £23,650; population in 1881, 1,690, and in 1891, 1,610, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 527.

Not far from the southern bank of Lake Rannoch are the barracks called Georgetown.

Braes of Rannoch is a small district and quoad sacra parish from Fortingall civil parish, and is at the upper end of the Loch Rannoch, about 6 miles from Rannoch station on the West Highland section of the North British railway. Sir Robert Menzies bart. and John S. O. Robertson-Luxford esq. are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 290.

Keltney Burn is a small village in the parish of Fortingall, about 6 miles from Aberfeldy station. There is a mill here engaged in the manufacture of tweeds, clan tartans &c. Population returned with the parish.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Kinrossshire.

FOWLIS, or Fowlis Easter, formerly part in Perthshire, has been, by the previously named Act, transferred to Forfarshire.

FOWLIS WESTER is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Crieff, with a station at Abercairney, 2½ miles north-east, on the Perth, Crieff and Comrie branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 3 north-east from Crieff and 13 west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been added to Fowlis Wester and parts of that parish transferred to the parishes of Little Dunkeld, Monzie and Monzievaird and Strowan. Cultoquhey, the seat of James Maxtone Graham esq. D.L., J.P. and Abercairney, the seat of Capt. William H. Drummond Moray, are situated here, the latter being the principal landowner and lord of the manor. Acreage, 22,803; rateable value, £13,251 5s. 7d.; population of the civil parish in 1881, 1,112, and in 1891, 968; and of the ecclesiastical, 662.

Gilmerton is a village in the parish of Fowlis Wester, on the road from Perth to Crieff, 2 miles north-east from Crieff railway station, and 3 west from Fowlis Wester.

Buchanty is a hamlet in the parish of Fowlis Wester, near the river Almond, 5 miles north from Fowlis Wester and 7 east from Methven station on the Perth and Comrie branch of the Caledonian railway, and 13 east from Perth, its post town. There is a school here supported by donations.

GLENDEVON is a village and parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 3½ miles north-by-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Alloa and Mawcarse junction of the North British railway, 14 miles north-east from Alloa and 15 south from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary orders 120 and 135, a part of Blackford parish, without population, and of Fossoway and Tulliebole parish, with a population of 32, have been transferred to this parish. It is pleasantly situated in a glen, the Ochil hills bounding it on the north and south. The Devon runs through the village, and in the neighbourhood there are some very beautiful falls; the river also abounds in trout, and in the season anglers have good sport. The only church (the Established) is about a mile from the village. There is a mill for wool spinning in the parish, in which also are the Dunfermline and Inverkeithing waterworks. Glendevon Castle, now in a good state of preservation, was formerly an outpost of the Red Douglas family. The Earl of Camperdown, David C. R. Lindsay esq. of Glendevon House, William James Haig esq. of Dollarfield, William L. Lawson esq. of Richmond-on-Thames, James S. Robertson esq. of Edradynate, and Col. John B. Harvey, of Tormaukin, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,133; rateable value, £4,815; population of the parish in 1881, 147, and in 1891, 109.

Post Office; Mrs. Annie Sinclair, postmistress. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 3.40 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Dollar. The nearest telegraph office is at Rumbling Bridge

KENMORE parish, which is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, lies in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding the large and beautiful lake of Loch Tay, which is 16 miles in length, varying from one to two in breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. The village of Kenmore occupies an eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it becomes a river, over which is a bridge of five arches, and is 6 miles south-west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway, 80 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-west from Perth and 24 west from Dunkeld. This is a favourite point in a tour of the Highlands, hence it is much visited in summer. The parish comprises objects both sublime and beautiful; amongst the former is Meall Ghaordie mountain, which rises to the height of 3,407 feet, and Ben Dheickach, 3,074 feet high. By the "Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Dull, with 47 population, Killin, with 61, and Fortingall, without population, and a part of Killin, with 122, and Weem, with 62 population, annexed to Kenmore. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March and on the 2nd of November (both old style), and the 28th of June, the 26th July, the 17th of September, and the 24th December. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the seat of the Marquis of Breadalbane K.G. who is the principal landowner. The mansion some years since was much enlarged and improved, and it now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. The parish contains an area of 67,195 acres; rateable value, £10,994; in 1881 the population was 1,508, and in 1891, 1,401 in the civil, and 1,271 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Acharn is a small village in Kenmore parish, on the east side of Loch Tay, about 2 miles south-west from the village of Kenmore and 8 south-west from Aberfeldy railway station. Near the village, in a wooody glen, are the celebrated Falls of Acharn. The Campbell family have built a grotto (called the "Hermitage") opposite to the greatest fall, where the water suddenly precipitates itself over a projecting rock a distance of about 250 feet.

KILLIECRANKIE, see MOULIN.

KILLIN is a mountainous and extensive parish in the Highland district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district; the village, a rapidly growing one, occupies a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochay and Dochart with the waters of the lake; it is 74 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-north-west from Stirling, 27 west-by-north from Crieff, 22½ north from Callander, and 16 south-west from Kenmore. The Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway is connected by the Killin line, by which Kenmore is brought into nearer contact through the Loch Tay steamers. This line is one of the finest in Scotland for grandeur and scenery. Anglers residing at the hotels have trout fishing free of charge in Loch Tay, which is one of the largest and most beautiful lochs in Scotland, and in point of salmon fishing, the season for which opens on 5th February, it is surpassed by none. The Falls of Lochy are about 3 miles from Killin, and are well worth a visit. The scenery between Killin and Kenmore can be seen to best advantage from the deck of one of the Loch Tay steamers. The west, or Killin end, is grand and wild, the mountains rising to a great height, and serrated into many jagged and fantastic sky-lines. Some rare ferns and cairngorm stones are found here. In the parish are Ben More Mountain, 3,843 feet high, and Ben Laoigh, 3,708 feet in height; near the latter is the source of the river Tay. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourite point of tour of the central Highlands. To view the scenery to advantage, the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Killin parish, with a population of 122, has been transferred to Kenmore, and a part of the parish of Kenmore, with 61, and Weem, with 40, population, added to Killin. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, the 5th and 12th of May, the Friday before Doune 1st of November fair, and the first Tuesday in November (old style). On a small island, formed by two branches of the river, and much in the shape of a coffin, is the burial place of the clan M'Nab. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which, severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence in the neighbourhood of Killin is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed Highland hero Fingal. Auchmore House, a fine seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G. is at the head of the loch on the south side, and opposite, on the north side, is the old picturesque burying ground and mausoleum of the family. The ivy-covered ruins of Finlarig Castle, one of the oldest seats of the Barons of Breadalbane, are close to the vault. In the gardens of Auchmore is a black Hamburg vine, covering 475 square yards of glass, and grows from a single stem which measures 22 inches at a height of 3 feet from the ground. The Marquess of Breadalbane and Edward G. Place esq. of Dochart, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 96,926 acres; rateable value, £11,765; the population in 1881 was 1,277, and in 1891, 2,402, and in the ecclesiastical, 1,061.

Strathfillan is 14 miles south from Killin, is a quoad sacra parish formed from Killin parish in Perthshire, and Glenorchy and Inishail parish in Argyllshire, and includes the villages of Clifton, Crianlarich and Tyndrum. The population in 1891 was 1,934.

Clifton is a small village in the western part of the civil parish, half a mile from Tyndrum stations on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and the Oban section of the Caledonian railway.

Crianlarich and Tyndrum are stations on the Callander and Oban railway, and the West Highland section of North British railway, and each has an excellent hotel.

KILMADOCK parish, which is in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Dunblane, comprises a district of great fertility, the land upon the banks of the Forth and Teith producing abundant crops of every description of grain. From the level margin of the former river the ground rises gradually to the Grampian mountains, which form the northern boundary of the parish; the face of the country here is delightful, with many romantic features. The parish contains the villages of Doune (which see) and Deanston. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 69, a portion of Kilmadock parish, with a population of 135, has been transferred to Kincardine, and a part of that parish, with 58 population, added to Kilmadock. The Earl of Moray, Lieut.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L. of Blair Drummond, Sir Robert Jardine bart. D.L. of Lanrick Castle, and J. Burn-Murdoch esq. of Gartencaber, are the principal landowners. The acreage of the civil parish of Kilmadock is 24,521; rateable value, £25,140; the population in 1881 was 3,012, and in 1891, 2,760, Doune containing 940 of that number, and in Kilmadock ecclesiastical parish, 2,593.

Deanston, a village in this parish, is 1 mile from Doune station. The extensive cotton mill of James Findlay and Co. is here. Deanston House is the residence of Sir John Muir bart. D.L., J.P. Population in 1891, 723.

Sub-Post Office, Burn of Cambus; Mrs. Elizabeth M'Innes, sub-postmistress. Letters through Stirling. Delivery, 7.15 a.m.; dispatch, 11.39 a.m. The nearest money order office is at Doune, a mile and a half distant KILSPINDIE is a parish, in the Carse of Gowrie and small debt court district of Perth, varying in distance from 5 to 9 miles east from Perth and 4 north from Glencarse station on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway. Kinnard Castle was built by Alexander surnamed the Fierce, for the suppression of robbers who infested the Carse of Gowrie from the north, and this castle continued in possession of the Crown until A.D. 1172: James VI. in the course of his visit to Scotland in 1617, spent upwards of a week at Kinnard Castle, arriving on the 22nd of May and leaving for Dundee on the 30th May: this castle now belongs to William Murray Threipland esq. of Fingask Castle. William Robertson esq. of Craiglochie and Over Durdie, Kilspindie, is the principal landowner. The area is 6,255 acres; rateable value, £5,185; the population in 1891 was 630.

KINCARDINE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is 4 miles south from Doune station on the Dunblane and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway and 3 north-east from Kippen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 45 west-by-north from Edinburgh, 39 south-west from Perth and 5 south from Callander. The parish lies between the rivers Teith and Frith, in the southern quarter of the county, in the strath of Menteith, bounded on the east by the river Teith and the south by the Forth; it is triangular in figure, one side 12 miles in length, another 16 and a third about 7. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 69, a part of Kincardine parish has been added to Kilmadock and a part of that parish transferred to Kincardine. Adjacent to the Teith and on the road from Stirling is the ornamental and improved estate of Blair Drummond, and is the seat of Lt.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L. upon which operations of great magnitude have been successfully carried on in draining the moss land, from which the estate is now said to be almost free; it is now most fertile and well cultivated. The Earl of Moray and Lt.-Col. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L. are the landowners. The area was 10,504 acres, but now somewhat altered since the reconstruction of parish boundaries; rateable value, £14,187; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 1,277, Thornhill containing 428 of that number, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 648.

Blair Drummond is a small village in the parish.

Thornhill, a village in this parish, will be found under a separate head.

KINFAUNS is a parish, about 5 miles long by a width of 2½, in the small debt court district of Perth; it is situated on the banks of the river Tay, about 2 miles east from Perth, and is a station on the Perth and Dundee line of the Caledonian railway. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, a part of Kinfauns parish, with a population of 42, has been annexed to Kinnoull, and part of Kinnoull, with 58 population, transferred to Kinfauns. Lt.-Col. Stuart-Gray, of Kinfauns Castle, is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 4,291; rateable value, £7,840; population in 1881, 583, and in 1891, 562.

Near the eastern declivity of Kinnoull Hill stands the beautiful castle of Kinfauns, in the centre of the delightful demesne of the same name, so richly embellished by the late Lord Gray.

Glencarse is a small village in the parish of Kinfauns, 6¼ miles east-by-south from Perth. It is a station on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway. The Episcopal church of All Saints is a building in the Domestic Gothic style, erected at a cost of £1,500. It is in the diocese of Brechin. Glendoick is another village.

KINLOCH-RANNOCH is a small village and quoad sacra parish formed from Fortingall and Logierait civil parishes, and is 13 miles south-west from Struan station on the Blair Atholl and Grantown section of the Highland railway, and about 13 east from Rannoch station on the West Highland section of the North British railway, about 25 north-west from Dunkeld, and 40 north-west from Perth. Loch Rannoch, at the head of which the village stands, is a fine sheet of water, about 11 miles in length and about three quarters of a mile in width. There is a granite monument in the village, erected by subscription, to the memory of Dugald Buchanan, Gaelic poet. The Established church, erected in 1829, was thoroughly restored and beautified in 1893, at a cost of £550. There are two splendid mansions in the parish, Dall House, the seat of Thomas Frederick Charles Vernon-Wentworth esq. and Dunalastair House, the seat of James Clark Bunten esq. D.L. Sir Robert Menzies bart. James Clark Bunten esq. Thomas F. C. Vernon-Wentworth esq. and Alexander Stewart esq. of Bunrannoch, are the principal landowners. Rateable value, £13,354; the population in 1891 was 547.

KINNOULL is a parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, and has its western extremity on the Tay, opposite Perth, extending thence in an irregular manner for nearly 4 miles, with a general breadth of 1 mile. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations. Many villas have been erected on the rising grounds to the east of the river, and forming part of the suburb of Perth. The village is 2 miles east from Perth station. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, part of Kinfauns, with a population of 42, and of Scone parish, with a population of 39, have been transferred to this parish, and a part of Kinnoull added to the parishes of Kinfauns with 28 population, St. Madeos with 121, St. Martins 208, and Scone 46. Kinnoull Hill is above 600 feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect of the surrounding country. The noble river that flows at the base of this towering cliff, the hills and the grandeur of the mountainous perspective, present a panorama rarely excelled. The ancient church of the parish was a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church is built on a bank, overhanging the Tay. Near this once stood the old castle of Kinnoull. St. Mary's, Kinnoull Hill, is a Roman Catholic establishment, consisting of the church and residence of the Redemptorist Fathers. The house serves also for the clergy and laity who come here to spend a short time in spiritual exercises. The building was erected from designs of Mr. Heiton, city architect, of Perth, and is in the Early English style of the 12th century. The James Murray Royal Asylum, erected from a bequest of Mr. James Murray, a native of Perth, is a Grecian-Doric building, opened in 1827 for private insane patients only; it is an endowed institution and Chartered Corporation, under the management of directors, and stands on Kinnoull Hill, in extensive pleasure grounds, surrounded by the fields of the Home Farm: two wings have been erected for acute cases. Kincarrathie House and Seven Gables, Elie, have been acquired as Convalescent Homes. The Perth and Perthshire Hospital for Incurables is on the Dundee road, and usually contains from 40 to 50 patients. Kinnoull has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Erroll, Sir George Hay, lord chancellor, 1622, being ennobled in 1627 as Baron Hay of Kinfauns and Viscount Dupplin, and elevated to the earldom in 1633 as Earl of Kinnoull. The Earl is the principal landowner. The parish comprised 3,646 acres previous to the alteration of the boundary; the population in 1881 was 3,461, and in 1891, 3,730, of which 3,402 are included in the royal burgh of Perth.

Balbeggie is a village in the parish of Kinnoull, on the road from Perth to Coupar Angus, 5 miles north-east from Perth.

Post & Telegraph Office, Balbeggie; Miss Agnes Gillespie, postmistress. Letters received through Perth. Deliveries, 8.35 a.m. & 2.45 p.m.; dispatches, 12.25 a.m. & 2.55 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Scone

KINROSSIE, see COLLACE.

KIPPEN parish, formerly partly in Perthshire, has been by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred entirely to Stirlingshire.

KIRKMICHAEL is an extensive parish, forming a combination poor law district with Logierait, and is in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is in the north-east corner of the county, adjoining Aberdeenshire on the north and the county of Forfar on the east. The parish, which is 17 miles in length and from 6 to 7 in breadth, comprises the greater part of Strathardle, and is intersected by the river Ardle, which is crossed by a bridge of two arches, and along the left bank of which an excellent road leads from Pitlochry to Blairgowrie. A military way from Coupar-Angus to Fort George traverses the northern part of the parish, by the Spittal of Glenshee. The surrounding country is hilly and very beautiful. The church stands on the high road from Coupar-Angus to Blairgowrie, 12½ miles east from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 172 north from Edinburgh, and 29 north from Perth and 13 north-west from Blairgowrie. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 72, a part of Bendochy parish, with a population of 144, of Caputh, with 21, and of Rattray, with 20, have been transferred to Kirkmichael parish. The market day is held on Friday. Ardle Grave, near Dirnanean, 9 feet in length, has been preserved, and handed down to posterity, favouring the supposition that this part of the country was inhabited by a race of Fingalians. From the Druidical remains in the parish it is supposed that Strathardle was the residence of an arch-druid; of these relics the principal are a rocking stone near Dalrulzion, a supposed Druidical altar near Balvarran, and numerous circles and cairns. Ashintully Castle is the seat of David C. Rutherford-Lindsay esq. D.L., J.P. The area is 57,283 acres; rateable value, £18,498; the poulation in 1881 was 849, and in 1891, 935.

Ballintuim is a hamlet in this parish, 3 miles east from Kirkmichael. The scenery around is very charming and interesting.

Enochdhu is another hamlet, 2 miles north of Kirkmichael.

LECROPT was originally a parish partly in Perthshire and partly in Stirlingshire; this latter portion contained a part of the village of Bridge of Allan, the other part of which was in Logie parish (Stirlingshire). By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, the part of Bridge of Allan then in Lecropt was transferred into Logie parish, while the landward portion of Lecropt (Stirlingshire), then left, was transferred to this county, thus placing the parish of Lecropt wholly in Perthshire. The quoad sacra parish, embracing all the original parish, retains its old boundaries. The village, in which is the parish church, a building in the Gothic style, lies about half a mile south-west of Bridge of Allan, overlooking the carse. Archibald Stirling esq. of Keir, and the Earl of Moray are the principal landowners. The area is about 2,900 acres; rateable value, £3,400; the population in 1881 was 602, and in 1891, as altered by transfers, 273.

LETHENDY and KINLOCH form a united parish, in the poor combination of Perth and the small debt court district of Blairgowrie.

Lethendy parish is 3 miles south-west from Blairgowrie terminal station on a branch from Coupar-Angus of the Caledonian railway, and about 15 north from Perth. The residence of Colonel John H. H. Gammell J.P. who is the lord of the manor and the principal landowner, is situated here. The area of the joint parishes is 7,060 acres; the population in 1881 was 404, and in 1891, 328.

Letters should have Blairgowrie added

Kinloch is 2 miles south of Blairgowrie railway station. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 72, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 16, has been transferred to Kinloch. There are three lakes in the neighbourhood, viz.: Fenzies Loch, Rae Loch and Marlee Loch, the latter being 3 miles in circumference and abounding with perch, pike and trout. The population in 1891 was 343.

LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county, in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. The village is about half a mile from Ballinluig station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Dunkeld, and the like distance north-east from Aberfeldy. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each about 7 miles. An iron bridge was erected in 1888 at a cost of £2,800, in place of the chain boat which previously was the only means of communication between the two sides of the river. Not far from the church is an eminence, which commands a prospect of the greater part of the parish, including the winding of the rivers, the vales and pastures, with the woodlands in some places extending to the river banks, and the distant mountains. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Dull parish with a population of 370, of Dunkeld and Dowally with 74, Moulin with 55, and Weem with 16, have been added to Logierait parish, and a part of Kinnoull parish, with 583 population, added to Dull, part with 129 to Weem, part with 63 to Moulin, and part with 121 to Fortingall. The parish is noted for the distillation of whisky. A monument has been erected to the late Duke of Atholl, by the gentlemen of the county and his tenantry. A Combination Poorhouse was built in 1864 for Logierait and ten adjoining parishes. It was at Logierait that Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Prestonpans. Tullymet is the residence of William Hutt Allhusen esq. Principal landowners, the Duke of Atholl K.T.; Archibald Edward Butter esq. of Faskally; William Maxwell esq. of Donavourd; James Blair esq. Middlehaugh; Miss Fergusson, Dunfallandy; the trustees of the late Rev. Alex. Campbell, of Eastertyre; John S. Steuart esq. D.L., J.P. of Ballechin; James Alexander Menzies esq. of Pittnacree; John Guthrie Lornie esq. F.S.S., M.S.A.Lond., J.P. of Pitcastle; the trustees of the late Duncan Macpherson esq. of Glendoll; Walter T. J. Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham esq. D.L., J.P. of Murthly Castle and the Marquess of Breadalbane. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary, was 37,759 acres; present rateable value, £17,385; the population of the civil parish in 1881 was 2,323, and in 1891, 3,730, and in the ecclesiastical, 2,033.

Ballinluig is a small village in the parish of Logierait, about half-way between Dunkeld and Pitlochry. There is a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for Aberfeldy. Population returned with the parish.

LONGFORGAN is a parish in the Perth small debt court district; it varies from one to 4 miles in breadth, and is 9 in length, forming the eastern boundary of the carse of Gowrie, and extending along the Tay on its southern extremity for more than 4 miles and surrounded on three sides by Inchture, Abernyte, Kettins, Lundie and Fowlis, Liff and Benvie. The village is on the ridge at an elevation of about 130 feet above the Tay, of which, with the whole of the intermediate country to the east, and particularly to the south and south-west, it commands an uninterrupted prospect, and is 6 miles south-west from Dundee, with a station one mile south on the Dundee and Perth section of the Caledonian railway. Near here, situated in a dell, are the ruins of a chapel, said to have been erected by Malcolm IV. in 1164, for a community of Cistercian monks. A fair is held every third Saturday in June (o. s.), chiefly for the sale of cattle. Castle Huntly is a noble specimen of an old baronial residence; it was erected about the middle of the 15th century, by the second Lord Gray, of Fowlis, who named it after his wife, a daughter of the Earl of Huntly, and who had large possessions in the carse. Its walls are 10 feet thick, and the height of the round tower is 116 feet, the view from the top commanding extensive and beautiful prospects of the Fife coast, with the Ochils and other loftier mountains; it is now the residence of Mrs. Armitstead. Lord Kinnaird, of Rossie Priory; J. Martin Whyte esq. of Balruddery,and the trustees of James Brown esq. of Lochton, are the principal landowners. The soil of the parish varies in quality, but upon the whole is exceedingly productive. There is also an abundant supply of stone of good quality. Acreage of the parish, 8,528; rateable value, £16,000; population in 1881, 1,854, and in 1891, 1,779.

MEIGLE, a parish in the district of Strathmore, is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village, the seat of a presbytery, is on the banks of the Isla, with a station on the Alyth branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 61 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north-by-east from Perth, 13½ north-north-west from Dundee, 5 north-east from Coupar-Angus, and 4 south from Alyth; the parish, 4½ miles in length and 2 in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. The parish church was erected on the site of the old one (destroyed by fire in March, 1869); it cost about £2,500, and was opened for public worship in July, 1870. In the churchyard are some old monuments, and tradition asserts it to be the grave of Queen Vanora, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur. The figures which, it is said, once delineated the history of Vanora, are so defaced and dilapitated as to render all attempts at deciphering their meaning fruitless. A cattle auction is held fortnightly, and fairs on the last Wednesday in June for cattle and horses, and on the last Wednesday in October for cattle. Belmont Castle is the seat of the Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman G.C.B., M.P., M.A., D.L., J.P.; the gardens and fine plantations render it a most delightful residence. In one of the enclosures a tumulus is pointed out, where, it is said, Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in the vicinity. Kinloch is the seat of Sir John George Smyth Kinloch bart. M.P., D.L. and Cardean, of Edward Cox esq. J.P. The Earl of Wharncliffe and Sir John G. S. Kinloch bart. M.P. are the principal landowners, the latter being also the lord of the manor. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Cardean, or Caerdean, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. There is a good hotel, viz.—the Kinloch Arms, with fishing on the Dean and Isla free. Area of the civil parish, 3,980 acres; rateable value, £11,312; population in 1881, 696, and in 1891, 660.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank; Donald Mackenzie, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 & 8.15 a.m. & 8 p.m.; dispatches, 6.30 a.m. & 2.30 & 5.45 p.m. Post messengers for Ruthven & Glamis are dispatched at 8.15 a.m

MEIKLE TROCHRY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MEIKLEOUR is a village, in the civil parish of Caputh, poor law combination of Logierait, and small debt court district of Perth, and is 2 miles north from Cargill station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, 4 south from Blairgowrie and 11½ north-east from Perth. The surrounding country is very beautiful, and the far-famed Beech Hedge, the chief attraction to the village, comprises trees reaching an average of 90 feet in height, and the length of the hedge is estimated at 580 yards. It is believed to have been planted in 1746, one year after the battle of Culloden. The village of Meikleour was once of considerable importance; a great annual fair used to be held, but it has now died out entirely. In a field close to the road stands a pillar, and near to the top is a hole for receiving a beam whereon to suspend scales for weighing wool &c. and which is the "trone" of former days. In the middle of the village stands the market cross, surrounded by an iron railing, and bearing the date 1698. A Roman dyke with the remains of a camp are still visible. The population of the village in 1891 was 97.

METHVEN is a parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Perth, and is bounded on the north by the river Almond. The village is on the high road from Perth to Crieff, and is the terminus of short line from Almond Bank station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles west from Perth and 11 north-east from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Methven, and a part of Methven, with a population of 53, added to Auchtergaven. Here is the grave of Bessie Bell and Mary Gray, whose beauty and seclusion from the world at the time of the plague, 1666, from which they ultimately died, have been recorded in Scottish song. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle, the seat of Colonel David Murray Smythe J.P. the principal landowner: the castle is distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. Trinity College, Glenalmond, on the banks of the Almond, is 10 miles north-west from Perth and 4 north-west from the Methven railway station: it was projected in 1841, and opened in 1847, for the double purpose of supplying a proper collegiate training to candidates for holy orders in the Scottish Episcopal church, and of establishing in Scotland a public school after the general model of those in England: the theological college has since been removed to Edinburgh: the site on which the college stands was presented by the late George Patton esq. of the Cairnies: the funds for the buildings were raised by general subscription, and among the benefactors were the Duke of Buccleuch, the late Sir John Gladstone bart. the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone and the late Right Rev. C. Wordsworth, the first warden of the college. The chapel, a building in the decorated style of Gothic architecture, 136 feet long by 52 wide, with a height of 70 feet, was erected at a cost of more than £8,000, at the sole expense of the late Right Rev. C. Wordsworth: the council consists of sixteen members, namely, the seven Scotch bishops, two deans and seven laymen: the resident masters are a warden, eleven assistant masters and a medical officer: music is taught by the organist. The area is 12,911 acres; population in 1891 was 1,747, the village numbering 657; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 1,734.

Almond Bank is a village in Methven parish and small debt court district of Perth, about 4 miles north-west from Perth, and is a station on the Perth, Methven and Crieff line of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1881, including Bridgeton, was 492, and in 1891, 343.

MONTEITH, see PORT OF MENTEITH.

MONZIE is a parish, in the poor combination of Upper Strathearn and small debt court district of Crieff, 3 miles north from Crieff railway station, on the south side of the Grampians. The surrounding country is mountainous, only about one-third being arable, the remainder being heather and moss. It is watered by the Almond, the Keltic, and the Shaggy, upon which are several romantic cascades. The only inhabited portions of the district are two valleys, separated from each other by a ridge of hills 4 miles broad. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98 a part of Auchtergaven parish, with a population of 56, of Fowlis Wester, with 98, and of Redgorton, with 25, have been transferred to Monzie, and a part of Monzie, with a population of 134, added to Crieff, part, with 115, to Methven, and part, with 25, to Monzievaird and Strowan. Monzie Castle is the seat of James Clark Bunten esq. D.L. Acreage, 21,487; population in 1881, 753, and in 1891, 501; ecclesiastical parish population in 1891, 273.

MONZIEVAIRD and STROWAN form a united civil parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and Crieff small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, without population, of Fowlis Wester, also without population, and of Monzie parish, with 25 inhabitants, have been transferred to Monzievaird and Strowan, a part of Monzievaird and Strowan, with a population of 27, to Comrie, and a part, with 13, added to Muthill.

Monzievaird is 3 miles north-west from Crieff, its nearest railway station. The river Earn passes through the district from west to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream the country is beautiful, well planted and inclosed. There are several small lakes in the parish, among which Monzievaird lake, situated at the bottom of a wood, and well stored with pike, perch and eels, is a delightful piece of water, and a great ornament to the pleasure grounds of Ochtertyre. On the bank of the lake a fine repeating echo is produced. Ben Chonzie mountain, 3,048 feet high, is in this parish. In this parish, towards the close of the 15th century, the clan Drummond, in pursuit of the Murrays, found they had taken refuge along with their wives and children in the old parish church, to which the Drummonds set fire, when every soul was burned save one, who escaped by leaping out of a window. Ochtertyre, the seat of Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart.; Glenturret, of the Rt. Hon. Sir John Rigby Q.C.; Tredegar, of David Robertson Williamson esq. D.L., J.P.; Lawers, of Andrew Grant esq.; Strowan, of Thomas James Graham-Stirling esq. D.L., J.P. and Clathick House, of Capt. William Campbell Colquhoun J.P. are all in this parish. David Robertson Williamson esq. J.P., D.L. is lord of the manor. Acreage, 26,093; rateable value, £10,516 7s. 11d.; population of the civil parish in 1881, 700, and in 1891, 593, and in the ecclesiastical, 490.

MOULIN is a large parish in the Highlands, extending towards the Forest of Athole, bounded on the north-east by the parish of Kirkmichael, on the south-east by Logierait, on the south-west by Dull, and on the west and north-west by Blair-Atholl. It is intersected by the Briarachan and the Fernate, which unite within the district. The latter runs through Glenfernate, and its junction with the Briarachan forms the Ardale. The several lochs are well stocked with trout, particularly Loch Broom. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is half a mile north from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 8 south from Blair-Atholl and 25 north from Perth; near to it stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. There is an excellent hotel in the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of Blair-Atholl parish, without population, and of Logierait, with a population of 63, have been added to this parish, and a part of Moulin parish, with a population of 9, added to Blair-Atholl, and with 13, to Muthill. The parish church was erected in 1832. There is a fair held at Moulin annually on the first Tuesday in March. In this parish is the pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the battle fought there on the 17th of July, 1689, between King William's army, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of Highlanders under Viscount Dundee, where, after defeating the royal troops, the gallant Claverhouse met with his death. There is a station at this place on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway. Faskally is the residence of Archibald Edward Butter esq.; Baledmund, of James Grant Fergusson esq. J.P.; Kindrogan, of Miss Keir; Urrard, of Mrs. Alston Stuart, and Dunfallandy, of Miss Fergusson. The principal landowners are A. E. Butter esq.; J. G. Fergusson esq.; Mrs. Alston Stuart; Miss Keir; James Small esq. D.L., J.P. of Dirnanean; Edward Wylan esq. of Tarvie; Major Alexander B. Stewart J.P. of Balnakeilly, and Colonel George Sandeman, of Fonab. The parish of Moulin has an acreage of 45,900; rateable value, £25,514; in 1881 the population was 2,066, and in 1891, 2,381, ecclesiastical parish, 2,382.

MUCKART is a village and parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 2 miles north-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Alloa and Mawcarse Junction section of the North British railway, 11 north-east from Alloa and 18 south-east from Crieff. It is triangular in shape, and length from east to west is about 5 miles, its greatest breadth from north to south about 2½ miles. The Devon forms its principal boundary, separating it from Fossoway on the south and east, while on the north and west two small streams separate it respectively from Glendevon and Dollar. A branch of the Ochil hills runs east and west along the northern boundary of the parish, terminating on the east by a conical-shaped hill called Sea-mab, 1,442 feet above sea level. The Devon in this neighbourhood displays a number of interesting waterfalls, amongst which are the falls of Rumbling Bridge, Devil's Mill and Caldron Linn. The water passes through fissures in the rocks, which in many places present the appearance of having been rent asunder. When viewed from the parapet of the Rumbling Bridge, 120 feet above the level of the river and over 500 feet above the sea level, the scenery beneath, on both sides, is such as not to be often met with, large numbers of visitors being drawn to the spot; and since the opening of the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway, for which there is a station at Rumbling Bridge, this locality has become much frequented. In 1645 every house in Muckart parish, including the church, was burnt by the Marquess of Montrose, when he sacked and destroyed Castle Campbell, at that time belonging to the Earl of Argyll. Besides the parish church, which is at Pool, a small village, there is a United Presbyterian church, one of the oldest in the denomination. John Christie esq. of Cowden Castle; James Richard Haig esq. F.S.A., D.L., J.P. of Blairhall; John James Moubray esq. M.A.,J.P.of Nae Moor; James Dewar esq. of Ballieliesk; James Orr esq. J.P. of Haviestoun Castle, and James McArthur Moir esq. of Lawhill, are the principal landowners. The soil of Muckart is in general light and gravelly, but in some parts it is more retentive. The area is 4,928 acres; the rateable value, £5,129; population in 1881, 601, and in 1891, 542.

Post Office; John Young, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Dollar R.S.O. Clackmannanshire. Delivery, 10.30 a.m.; dispatch, 4.25 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Rumbling Bridge

MURTHLY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Crieff, on the borders of the Highland district,on the right bank of the Earn. The village is on the great military road from Dunblane to Inverness by Tummel Bridge,19 miles north from Stirling, 16 south-west from Perth and 3 south from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff junction and Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway, one and a half miles east from the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Crieff parish, with a population of 12, and of Monzievaird and Strowan parish, with 13, have been transferred to Muthill, and a part of Muthill parish, with a population of 35, added to Comrie. There is a church, in ruins, said to have been built in 1419; the tower appears to be of an earlier date, and is doubtless of Pictish origin. Culdees Castle is the seat of Robert Thomas Napier Speir esq. D.L., J.P. Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Perth, is now the residence of the Earl of Ancaster P.C. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner: it is finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, and attracts the attention and admiration of every stranger from the beautiful prospect it commands. Muthill parish has an area of 21,916 acres; rateable value, £19,334; the population in 1881 was 1,702, and in 1891, 2,123 in the civil, and 1,639 in the ecclesiastical parish.

PERTH.

PERTH (Gadh. "barr-tatha," the height on the Tay) is an ancient city, royal burgh, the seat of a synod, conjointly with Stirling, and of a presbytery, and the capital of the county to which it gives its name; it is also a civil parish and head of a poor combination and is on the river Tay, about 10 miles from the Firth, 46 north from Edinburgh, 62 north-east from Glasgow, 22 south-west from Dundee, 15 south from Dunkeld, and 16 south from Blairgowrie, with a station used jointly by the Caledonian, North British and Highland railways, the Perth and Dundee line crossing the Tay by a bridge and a viaduct over Moncrieff Island. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 70, a portion of the parish of Tibbermore has been transferred to Perth, and a part of Perth parish added to Tibbermore. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, with the Grampians in the distance; it is bounded on the north and south by two fine meadows, known as the North and South Inches, and used as public recreation grounds, the former covering 100, and the latter 72 acres; both are ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, which occasionally overflows them. Traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, were at one time visible on the South Inch, but the site is now occupied by modern buildings. The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is very picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a fine avenue of trees, extending to the town. The city itself is large and well built and the principal streets are long and well paved. The river Tay, on which the city stands, is crossed by a fine bridge, constructed from the designs of John Smeaton F.R.S. the eminent engineer. It was originally narrow, admitting of a footpath on one side only, but in 1871 was widened at a cost of over £2,000, by the addition of cast-iron footways, with Caithness pavement and balustrades. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can deliver and receive cargoes at the harbour; and two steamers pass frequently between Perth and Dundee. Fishing boats and their implements are marked with the letters "P. E. H."

Perth has long been noted for its dye works and for the manufacture of inks, but it is also famous for the manufacture of gauge glasses, which are sent to all parts of the world. There are also extensive works for the manufacture of linen and jute, winceys, woollens &c.; brewing, iron founding, rope and sail making are also pursued, and the coal, corn and timber trades employ in the aggregate a large number of hands.

The city is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from the Tay, which is purified in a filtering bed, 300 feet long, constructed in the gravel, at the upper end of Friarton Island, with a branch of the river flowing on either side, and producing, at all seasons, an unlimited quantity of pure, soft and limpid water, which is thence conveyed to a reservoir at the east end of Marshall place, in the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, designed by Dr. Anderson, formerly rector of the Academy, and erected under his immediate superintendence. The reservoir itself is an ornament to the town, and the whole project, as conceived by Dr. Anderson, has proved highly successful. The expense of the work was defrayed by an assessment or water rate on the real rents above a certain amount. By the "Perth Water Act," now in full operation, the present system has been extended to all parts of the city and suburbs, thus affording to the entire community an unlimited supply of pure water.

Perth was a burgh as early as 1106, but in 1210 was fortified, and constituted a royal burgh, with confirmation of all its former privileges, by William the Lion. Until 1482 it ranked as the capital of Scotland, although Edinburgh became the seat of government in 1437; in 1617 it was visited by James VI. (James I. of England), who accepted the office of provost of the city. The city is now divided into four wards, and is governed by a lord provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors. The council thus consists of twenty-six members, all of whom, with the exception of the dean of guild, are, since the passing of the "Reform Bill of 1867," elected by household suffrage. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the Guildry Incorporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors from amongst themselves. The council meets on the first Monday in every month; a sheriff court is held every Tuesday and Friday during session, and two courts at least in each vacation. The magistrates have also the power of inflicting summary punishment for petty offences. The police, lighting, cleansing, paving &c. are controlled by a body of Police Commissioners, acting under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892."

Perth is in the eastern parliamentary division of the county and was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, in pursuance of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), returning one member.

The Episcopal Cathedral of St. Ninian, in Atholl street, built in 1850, is a large and lofty structure in the Early Geometric style, and consists of choir with vestries, transepts, clerestoried nave of four bays, with aisles, a western tower (at present without spire) and attached to it on the north side a spacious porch with gabled parvise: above the roof of the crossing rises an open bellcote with spirelet. The cathedral is the head of the united diocese of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane, formed in 1844, but accounts of these as separate dioceses, together with descriptions of their cathedral churches, will be found under the respective headings.

St. John's Episcopal church, Princes street, which stands on the site of a former chapel, is an edifice in the Early English style, and affords about 500 sittings.

The Episcopal School church, near the station, in connection with St. John's, is used on week days as a school.

The church of St. John the Baptist is an ancient edifice of stone, originally cruciform, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of St. Johnstoun; it consists of choir, nave, transepts, and a tower with singularly designed spire, and a peal of bells hang outside the tower under a kind of shed. Originally the interior formed a single church, but it is now divided by screens so as to accommodate three separate congregations; the various divisions being known as the East, Middle and West churches: the choir, or East church, was re-opened in June, 1893, after restoration, in the course of which the accumulated whitewash and paint were removed from the pillars, and the unsightly galleries which blocked the beautiful windows were removed: the transepts, forming the Middle church, after being restored and renovated consequent on the fire which occurred about a year previous, were re-opened on the 15th March, 1896: the arcades of the nave and the piers supporting the tower have been restored to their original state; the plaster and whitewash have been cleared away, and the arches and the triple window in the south transept now brought to view disclose a new portion and give an indication of the original church of St. John. The greater part of the cost has been provided out of the insurance money, but the congregation has also contributed about £200; it is now (1896) proposed to remove the partition walls which divide the church, with the view of eventually throwing the whole building into one, as in the first instance.

St. Paul's church, at the end of High street, in South Methven street, is a modern building of stone, with a steeple.

St. Leonard's church, in King street, was erected in 1835; the expense being defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions.

The Free church and the different bodies of Presbyterian dissenters have numerous chapels. There is a Baptist chapel in South street, and a Roman Catholic chapel in Melville street.

The Perth Academy, in Rose terrace, was erected in 1805, and is a building of freestone, embellished with noble pillars. Since the passing of the "Scotch Education Act, 1872," the School Board has remodelled the interior of the buildings and substantially improved the capacity and equipment of the institution, more especially for a complete scientific and technical training; the school is now arranged in two divisions—the lower, or elementary school, and the higher, or secondary school; the latter having for its object what is commonly called middle class education, as given in the best higher public schools. The session commences in September and ends on 30th June. Since 1891 the modern side of the school has been largely developed, and is worked as an organised science school in connection with the Science and Art Department at South Kensington.

Sharp's Educational Institute, in South Methven street, erected by the trustees of the late Mr. John Sharp, baker, of Barnhill, Perth, was opened in September, 1860. The institution is arranged in junior and senior departments; special attention is given to the industrial training of girls in sewing, knitting, household economy &c.; the elder boys are taught calisthenics and drill.

The Municipal Buildings, at the east end of High street, erected in 1881, at a cost of £13,000, are in the Tudor style, from designs by Mr. Granger Heiton, architect, of Perth, and have a frontage to the river. The council chamber, or Commissioners' Hall, which occupied the principal portion of the building and was adorned with stained glass illustrative of personages in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Fair Maid of Perth," was completely destroyed by fire in January, 1895, together with its valuable contents, as well as a portion of the public offices, but is now (1896) in course of restoration from the original plans by Mr. Granger Heiton. The buildings also contain the offices of the city clerk, chamberlain, registrar, assessor, police superintendent, treasurer to the police commissioners, and gas offices. The burgh court room, which has its principal entrance from Tay street, is on the first floor above the police office, and communicates therewith.

The County Buildings, in Tay street, on the bank of the Tay, were erected from the designs of Mr. Stuart, architect, and display, in the centre, an elegant portico with twelve massive fluted columns, supporting a pediment; the county hall, a fine room, 68 feet by 40, occupies the south wing; the centre contains a justiciary hall of semi-circular form, with a spacious gallery. The remainder of the building on the same floor includes the sheriff court and room, sheriff clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room where the records of the town are deposited; above is a spacious ball room and a card room &c. In 1866 an additional building was erected in South street.

The City Hall, at the west end of St. John's church, was erected by the town, and will seat 1,500 persons; it is open for public meetings, application to be made to the city chamberlain.

The Marshall Memorial, at the end of George street and near the bridge, is a circular structure in the Classic style, with a portico of the Ionic order and a dome, and was erected by private subscription to the memory of the late Thomas Marshall esq. of Glenalmond, formerly lord provost. The interior contains apartments occupied by the public library and the museum of the Perth Literary and Antiquarian Society; the latter includes a collection of valuable coins, medals and manuscripts, besides a great variety of natural curiosities, amongst which is a cabinet of minerals, containing upwards of twelve hundred choice specimens.

The Perthshire Natural History Museum has, exclusive of the museum halls, a large lecture room, library and laboratory. These form a single building between 200 and 300 feet in length, in the Scottish baronial style, from the designs of Messrs. J. and G. Young, architects, of Perth. In 1894 and 1895 a large addition was made to the museum, and it is now one of the most completely equipped in Scotland.

Early this year (1896) tenders were accepted for the erection of a Public Library, under the Sandeman bequest.

The Freemasons' Hall, in Parliament close, High street, built on the site of the old Parliament House, in 1818, is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons.

The Perth Boys' and Girls' Religious Society Hall, erected in 1881, at a cost of about £3,200, will hold from 600 to 700 children, and contains, besides the hall, a directors' room, two large class rooms, lady workers' room and offices.

The Poorhouse, an extensive pile of buildings, on the Glasgow road, was erected by the Perth Parochial Board, at a cost of £8,000.

The barracks, built in 1795, at the west end of Atholl street, were originally intended for 200 cavalry, but are now occupied by the depot of the Royal Highlanders (Black Watch).

The general prison for Scotland, near the South Inch, built by Government in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war, was wholly rebuilt and remodelled in 1842, and is now occupied as a convict prison, more extensive buildings having been erected for the purpose.

The County and City of Perth Royal Infirmary, in York place, is a structure in a plain Italian style, two storeys in height, and consisting of a long block of buildings, with a projecting centre and wings and a spacious arcaded portico; the first stone was laid by George William, 9th Baron Kinnaird K.T. in 1836, and it was opened in 1838. The late Marquess of Breadalbane and Dr. Brown, of Perth, left liberal bequests to this institution. A new west wing, containing additional wards for the treatment of infectious diseases, was erected in 1865, at a cost of £1,200, defraved principally by subscription, and in 1869 an east wing for surgical cases was added. Various other extensions and improvements were made in 1873-4, 1885 and 1893, and during 1894 there were 677 house patients and 680 accident cases, and 337 patients were visited by the district surgeon; attached to the infirmary is a dispensary, at which, in 1894, 756 patients were treated.

King James the Sixth's Hospital was founded by King James VI. in 1569, and charters were granted by that monarch in 1569 and 1587, and confirmed by Acts of Parliament in 1587 and 1592, "to provide by all honest ways and means an hospital for the poor, maimed, distressed persons, orphans, and fatherless bairns within our burgh of Perth," and for the endowment of which he gave "all the lands, biggins, tenements, kirks, orchards &c. which pertained to the chaplainries, altarages and prebendaries, founded in whatever kirk, chapel or college within the liberties and privileges of the said burgh of Perth; all the lands &c. which pertained to the Blackfriars, Greyfriars and Carmelite monks at the Reformation—the profits of the same to be applied, in all time coming, to the hospital and sustenance of the poor." Instead of residing in the hospital the pensioners live out, and receive an equivalent of £6 and £12 a year; the hospital building is now for the most part converted into dwelling houses for the working classes.

A statue of the late Prince Consort, executed by Mr. Brodie, sculptor, Edinburgh, was erected in 1864 on the North Inch, and inaugurated by Her Majesty on the 30th of August of that year, on which occasion the late Sir David Ross, then lord provost, was knighted.

There are public swimming baths in Dunkeld road, where every description of baths may be had.

The principal hotels are the Royal George, in George street; the Station, at the General Railway station; the Salutation, in South street; the Royal British and the Queen's (opposite the railway station).

The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Company's Bank, have each two branches in the city, and there are also branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Lim. and the Town and County Bank Limited, as well as a savings bank.

The Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry of the locality.

The weekly market day is Friday. The fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council, on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the dates formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places; they are now, therefore, held on the first Friday in March, April, July and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Inverness wool fair, and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May. There are now two great cattle and sheep markets in Perth, sales taking place on Monday and Friday.

Three newspapers are published here, viz.: the "Perthshire Advertiser" (Liberal Unionist), established in 1829, and published three times a week, with a large and influential circulation in Perthshire and the midland counties; the "Perthshire Constitutional and Journal" (Conservative), established in 1832, and circulating among the nobility, gentry &c.; and the "Perthshire Courier and Farmers' Journal," established in 1809, and Liberal in politics.

The population of Perth civil parish in 1881 was 28,948, and in 1891, 26,744. The population of the parliamentary and police burgh, 1891, was 29,899, viz.: first ward, 7,055; second ward, 7,622; third ward, 6,121 and fourth ward, 9,151, and of the royal burgh, 30,100, which comprises parts of the civil parishes of Perth, Kinnoull, Scone and Tibbermore. The area of Perth parish comprises 3,658 acres

Immediately adjoining the bridge is the suburb of Bridgend, leading to Kinnoull Hill, at the distance of a mile and a half, which can be ascended by various pleasant walks.

Craigend is a small hamlet on the Edinburgh road, 2 miles from and in the parish of Perth. There is a United Presbyterian church and a school here.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village in the parish of Moulin, parliamentary division of West Perthshire, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination, Perth county court district, and is a station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway; it is 13 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 28 north from Perth, on the banks of the Tummel, and surrounded by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery found in the Highlands of Perthshire, and is the resort of numerous persons to visit places of interest, also for fishing in the river and Loch Tummel. Spout Dhu, or the black waterfall, Ben Vraeky, one of the Grampians, the falls of Tummel and the Pass of Killiecrankie are all in the immediate neighbourhood. There are two hydropathic establishments—the Atholl and the Pitlochry, the first-named being one of the finest in Scotland, the cost of erection of which was over £100,000: the house occupies a commanding position in the Vale of Atholl, the public rooms being large and richly furnished; the latter was opened in 1890, and commands an extensive view of the surrounding country. The Barbour Institute is a very fine building, erected in 1895, by the Barbour family, in memory the late Rev. R. W. Barbour. The Established church is a structure in the Gothic style, erected in 1884, on an elevated site, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. The Free church here is a handsome edifice, and for the convenience of the great influx of visitors there is a small but beautiful church in the Gothic style about half a mile to the east of the village, called Holy Trinity Episcopal church, which was built in 1858, and enlarged in 1891. There is also a Baptist church. Fairs are held annually on the Saturday before Amulree, in May; on the Friday after Falkirk tryst, in August (for lambs), and on the third Wednesday in October (old style). There is a manufactory in the village, carried on by Messrs. Macnaughton, which is noted for the excellence of its Highland tweeds and plaids. Whisky is extensively distilled in this place and neighbourhood. There are several good hotels, and branches of the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a branch of the Perth Savings Bank. Clachnafaire is the seat of Sir Francis Boyd Outram bart. Population in 1881, 777, and in 1891, 1,230.

PORT OF MENTEITH (or Monteith) is a parish in the ancient district of Monteith, in Dumbarton poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district, and is bounded on the south by the river Forth, which separates this county from Stirlingshire. The Goodie water, a tributary of the Forth, rises in Lake Menteith and flows through the eastern portion of the parish. The church stands on the high road from Dunblane to Dumbarton, 4 miles north from the Port of Monteith station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 3 north-east from Gartmore terminal station on a branch from Buchlyvie on the same section, and 15 north-west from Stirling. The Loch or Lake of Menteith is a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about 5 miles in circumference, and is adorned by the small island of Inchmaholm, where stand the fine remains of a priory, or monastery, founded in 1238, of which the ruins of the church and cloisters are very extensive. The archway entrance is very elegant. The dormitory and vaults have been for ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. The ruins of these interesting buildings are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth; some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity, on a gentle eminence, are seen the remains of what is still known as Queen Mary's Bower, where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, the young princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. On a smaller islet, a little distance from Inchmaholm, stand the remains of the principal residence of the Earls of Menteith. The Menteith Hotel adjoins the loch, and affords excellent accommodation. Robert Cunninghame-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore House; Henry David Erskine esq. D.L., J.P. of Cardross; the Duke of Montrose K.T.; the Rev. Henry Alexander Graham Sheppard M.A. of Rednock; George Crabbie esq. of Blairhoyle; John Graham esq. (sheriff), of Perth, and James Carnegie esq. D.L. of Stronvar, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 22,238; rateable value, £11,211; population in 1881, 1,175, and in 1891, 1,092 in the civil and 562 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Gartmore is a village in this parish, but is given under a separate heading.

Hammersmith is a small hamlet in Port of Menteith parish. The nearest railway station is Port of Menteith, 5 miles south-west. Population returned with the parish.

Ruskie is a small hamlet in the parish of Port of Menteith. Kippen is the nearest railway station, 4 miles south-west. Population returned with the parish.

RANNOCH, see FORTINGALL.

RATTRAY—NEW and OLD form a police burgh and parish, adjoining Blairgowrie, its nearest railway station on a branch of the Caledonian railway, and approached by a bridge of four arches which spans the river Ericht. The surface is hilly and the land on the banks of the river arable and fertile, while the higher grounds are only suitable for pasture. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary order 72, a portion of Rattray parish, containing a population of 572, has been transferred to Tibbermore. The burgh is in the poor combination of Perth and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie, and is governed by a police commission, consisting of one bailie, two junior bailies and six commissioners. On the banks of the river Ericht are flax and jute mills, which give employment to a large number of persons. Within the parish is Craighall, the seat of Lieut.-Gen. James Clerk Rattray C.B., J.P., D.L. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner: the mansion is said to have been visited by Scott in 1793, and was one of the prototypes of "Tullyveolan" in Waverley; it is of modern construction and stands upon a summit of a perpendicular rock about 250 feet above the bed of the river and is open free on Tuesdays and Fridays. To the south-east of the burgh is an oblong mound called the Castlehill, surmounted by vestiges of the ancient castle of Rattray. From Hatton Hill, on a clear day, Perth can be seen, and it was at the Hatton of Rattray that the Scottish martyr, Donald Cargill, a Scotch covenanting divine, was born 1610 and executed 1681. Acreage, 5,382; rateable value, £11,300; poulation in 1881, 3,051, and in 1891, 2,667 in the civil parish and 2,225 in the police burgh.

Sub-Post Office, Old Rattray; Alexander Robertson, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Blairgowrie at 8 & 10 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 8.30 a.m. & 1.50 & 4.40 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Blairgowrie

Sub-Post Office, New Rattray; John F. Grant, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Blairgowrie at 7 & 9.30 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 8.50 a.m. 2, 4.50 & 9.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Blairgowrie

ST. MARTINS is a parish and village, 5½ miles north-east of Perth and 2½ south-west from Stanley station on the Alyth and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and in the small debt court district of Perth. The parish is of an irregular shape, about 5 miles in length from east to west and 2½ broad. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order 71, a portion of Kinnoull parish, containing a population of 208, has been transferred to this parish. The soil is black moorland. Guildtown is a small village in this parish. At Cairnbeddie are the remains of a castle, once occupied by Macbeth, and, as tradition states, this place not being secure, he removed to the celebrated hill of Dunsinane, where he fortified a castle. About a mile from his old residence, at a place called "The Witch Stane" (where a remarkable stone still stands), is pointed out the spot where he was met by the witches. Dunsinane is the residence of William Nairne esq. J.P., D.L. The trustees of Colonel William Macdonald are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,565 acres; rateable value, £8,364; the population in 1891 was 871, and in 1881, 741.

SCONE is a parish and small village, 2½ miles north-east from Perth; the parish, which extends 5 miles from east to west by 2½ broad, is in the small debt court district of Perth, the nearest railway station being in that city. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order No. 71, a part of Kinnoull, with a population of 46, has been transferred to Scone, and a part of Scone, containing a population of 80, transferred to Cargill and to Kinnoull, with 39 population. A little westward of the village is the site of the Royal Palace, founded here by Kenneth II. when he removed the seat of the Scottish monarchy from Dunstoffanage Castle about 850, and deposited here the Stone of Destiny, which subsequently rested in the abbey until its removal to Westminster, London, by Edward I.: the abbey was founded by Alexander I. 1114, which stood close to the palace, and is now represented by a part of one aisle, used as the burial place of the Viscounts of Stormont: the Earl of Gowrie, who lost his life and his estates for the attempt to imprison King James VI. (known as the Raid of Ruthven), began the palace which preceded the present one on the site of the old palace of the Kings of Scotland, and Sir David Murray, of Gospatrick, cup-bearer to and favourite of the king, who received the grant of these estates, together with the title of Baron Scone, and subsequently that of Viscount Stormont, finished this palace in 1606; it was in this building that King Charles II. was crowned King of Scotland in 1651: the present mansion, which is modern, occupies the same site overhanging the Tay, and contains much of the old furniture, including some bedhangings embroidered by Queen Mary: the old gallery, in which the coronation took place, is 160 feet in length, and is included in the modern palace, now the seat of the Earl of Mansfield K.T. a descendant of the last Viscount Stormont. Near the house stands the old market cross of Scone, surrounded by a wilderness of pleasure grounds, which have usurped the site of the ancient village; it has been aptly observed that "there are many instances of towns losing their market crosses, but this is the only cross which has lost its town." The Earl of Mansfield is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 7,815 acres; rateable value, £12,543; the population in 1891 was 2,150, of whom 50 were included in the royal burgh of Perth, and in 1881, was 2,402, with 41 in the burgh of Perth.

THORNHILL (or Thornhill-in-Menteith) is a village, in the northern part of the parish of Kincardine, and included in the quoad sacra parish of Norrieston. It consists chiefly of one street, extending nearly half a mile in length, and is near the river Teith, about 1 mile south from Doune station on the Stirling and Callander section of the Caledonian railway, about 5 miles west from Dunblane and 30 south-west from Perth. A Masonic Hall was built in 1893, at the corner of Callander and Thornhill roads, from designs of Mr. S. Henbest Capper M.A., A.R.I.B.A. architect, at the cost of Mr. George Grabbie, of Blairhoyle, on a site given by Lt.-Col. Stirling-Home-Drummond, of Blair Hammond. The building is of Kippen bricks, with Aberfoyle green slates for the hall, and Alloa red tiles for the tower, in the Scottish domestic style, and consists of vestibule, lodge room and private room; over the entrance is a clock tower, the upper storey of which is used as a belvedere and smoking room.

TIBBERMORE (or Tibbermuir) is a parish in the small debt court district of Perth, and is 3 miles south from Almondbank station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, and about 5 west from Perth. The May water has its confluence with the river Earn about the centre of the parish. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Tibbermore parish, with a population of 853, has been transferred to Perth, and part of the latter parish, with 572 population, added to Tibbermore. The village is a manufacturing district, having within it the extensive bleach fields of Messrs. Lumsden & Mackenzie. Tibbermuir has given its name to the first battle that was fought between the Marquess of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the covenanting forces were totally routed. The ancient castle of Huntingtower is in Tibbermuir, and is worthy of notice as being formerly the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI. was confined by the Earl of Gowrie and other conspirators in the year 1582; it is at present the residence of William Whitelaw esq. The area of the parish is 6,140 acres; rateable value, £16,701; the population in 1881 was 1,983, and 1891, 1,692, of which 863 are included in the royal burgh of Perth.

WEEM is an extensive Highland parish, in the district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. It is bounded on the north and west by the parish of Dull, on the east by Logierait and on the south by the river Tay. The church of Weem is about 2 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 74 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 34 north-west from Perth. About midway down the Loch Tay is Ben Lawers, one of the highest mountains in Scotland, being 3,984 feet high, and is well known to botanists, and from its summit a fine prospect is obtained on a clear day. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50,sections 44 to 50),boundary order 73, part of the parish of Dull, with a population of 156 and of Logierait, with 129, have been added to Weem, and a part of Weem, with a population of 81, transferred to Dull, a part with 55 to Fortingall, a part with 62 to Kenmore, a part with 40 to Killin and a part with 16 population to Logierait parishes. There is an Episcopal church (St. David's), built in the Norman style, at a cost of £2,000; it was the gift of Sir Robert Menzies bart. and friends. Amongst the objects of interest in the immediate vicinity are Taymouth Castle, ruins of Garth Castle, Meggernie Castle, Birks of Aberfeldy, Falls of Moness, Acharn and Keltney. Near the church is Castle Menzies, the seat of Sir Robert Menzies bart. D.L., J.P.; this is a handsome building with lofty turrets, surrounded by fine plantations, pleasure grounds and orchards. Near the castle is the Weem Hotel, an establishment admirably adapted for the reception of families and other visitors. Sir Robert Menzies bart.; J. S. Robertson esq. of Edradynate; Mrs. Douglas, of Killiechassie and D. F. Dempster esq. Derculich, are the principal landowners. The parish had an acreage of 41,887 previous to the alteration of the boundary; rateable value of present area, £4,858; the population in 1881 was 474, and in 1891, 437.

RENFREWSHIRE.

THIS county lies south of the Clyde, opposite to Dumbartonshire, and divided from Argyllshire by the Firth of Clyde, being bounded on the south by Ayrshire and east by Lanarkshire; it extends from north-west to south-east about 30 miles, by 10 to 15 broad, and comprises 156,785 acres, or 245 square miles; it is a large trading and manufacturing centre, and contained in 1891 a population of 138,261 males and 152,537 females; total, 290,798, since which 59,959 persons have been transferred to Lanark county and 103 to Ayrshire, also 76 transferred from Lanarkshire to Renfrewshire, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," leaving the population as 110,520 males and 120,292 females, and inhabited houses, 46,805. The county in size is the twenty-seventh, and in population the third, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—When the Roman invaders advanced in A.D. 80 from the Solway Firth, this district was occupied by the "Damnii," a British tribe; the principal Roman station was established near where Paisley now stands, and called Vanduara, which was an outwork to the left flank of the great wall of Antonine. After the retreat of the Romans in 410, the Cumbrian Britons, with a capital city at Alclyde (Dumbarton), retained a hold on all the country west of the Lothians, which they held until 756, and in 1097 this part was regularly incorporated with the Scottish kingdom under Edgar. In the reign of David I. Walter, the son of Alan, fled from Shropshire during the troublous conflicts of Maud and Stephen, and settled in the district, where David I. made him steward and gave him lands to support the dignity of his office. Besides these possessions, he subsequently acquired the whole district of Strathgryfe and the western half of Kyle, in Ayrshire, which hence was called Kyle Stewart. Such was the manner in which the first of the royal family of Stewart settled in Scotland. At this period the country in this quarter was in a semi-barbarous state, but Walter the Stewart introduced new and civilised usages. He settled many of his military followers on his lands, and by founding the abbey of Paisley, introduced a body of instructed men, who taught the ancient people domestic arts and foreign manners. For several centuries this district formed a portion of Lanarkshire. In 1404 Robert III. created a principality, consisting of the barony of Renfrew and the whole of the Stewart's estates, with the earldom of Carrick and the barony of King's Kyle, all of which he granted, in a free regality, as a provision for his son James; and this principality continued, in after times, the appropriate appanage of the eldest sons of the Scottish monarchs. In consequence of these arrangements, the identity of the barony of Renfrew and the shire of Lanark was dissolved, and the former placed under the jurisdiction of a separate sheriff. Baron Renfrew is at the present time one of the titles of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. At Langside, in the extreme east of the county, was fought, 1568, the battle so fatal to Queen Mary, and ending in her flight to England.

Soil, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is very much diversified. In those parts of the high grounds which are not covered by heath and moss, a fine light soil on a gravelly substratum is generally found. In the portion composed of detached hills the surface is a thin earth, based on gravel; and in the level districts the plough or spade sinks through a deep, rich brown loam. More than one-half of the shire, comprehending the west and south-east portions, is hilly, and devoted to pasture. The cultivated districts comprise the north, the north-east, and the centre of the county, and consist partly of low elevations, and partly of a level tract of rich loam between Paisley and the river Clyde. The hilly part varies in elevation from 500 to 1,250 feet; Misty Law, the hill of greatest altitude in the shire, is 1,663 feet high. Owing to the great demand in this county for dairy produce, and that also of the garden and the fold (arising from the vicinity of large and populous towns), nearly one-half of the land in the shire is kept under grass. Nevertheless the system of agriculture is of the most advanced kind, the crops in general being excellent, and comprising wheat, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes, of which latter great quantities are grown for Glasgow and the markets of other large towns. The chief crops are wheat, 1,462 acres; oats, 12,767 acres; turnips, 2,407 acres; potatoes, 2,997 acres, and hay of all kinds, 20,025 acres; the total corn crop being 14,748 acres and the total green crops, 5,872; land under grass, 73,029 acres; permanent pasture, 49,916 acres; total area of land and water, 158,114 acres; the live stock in 1894 comprised, horses, 3,501; cattle, 25,658; sheep, 36,761 and pigs, 1,499. The minerals of this shire are of considerable value, coal, limestone, ironstone and sandstone abounding in various parts of it; the first-named being wrought principally in the neighbourhoods of Renfrew, Bishopton, Quarrelton, Nitshill, Neilston, and other places. Underneath the ironstone large quantities of shale are found, from which is extracted a valuable oil, for the manufacture of which large works are established. The production of fire-clay in 1894 was 31,279 tons, value £4,431; of coal, 49,236 tons, value £13,540; of iron ore, 82,758 tons, value, £28,965; of oil shale, no separate return has been given; 9,021 tons of gannister and 12,120 of building stone were produced. In point of commercial and manufacturing importance this county is second only to that of Lanark, and with it unites in constituting the great manufacturing districts of Scotland. The goods produced are chiefly of cotton and silk, including, amongst various articles and fabrics, shawls of infinite diversity in texture and price. Whilst Paisley is the head-quarters of the trade in these articles, the business of weaving is pursued, to a greater or less extent, in almost every town, village, and hamlet. Another important branch is the manufacture of sewing cotton, which is carried on very extensively at Paisley. Besides those already mentioned, there are numerous bleachfields, calico and shawl printing works, dyeworks, immense flax-spinning mills, linen thread, sailcloth, paper, starch, and earthenware manufactories, large iron foundries, engineering, ship and boat building works, distilleries, breweries, sugar refineries, and many other branches of commerce of a varied and important character. The free export of manufactured goods is promoted by the different seaports on the Clyde, especially Greenock, by which also foreign produce is imported. The Forth and Clyde canal connects this county with many other shires. The fishing trade is centred at Greenock, where 948 boats, equal 2,772 tons and employing 1,643 ordinary and 1,938 extra hands, were registered in 1894; in this port and that of Port Glasgow, 351 other vessels, equal 320,720 tons were registered in the same year, and 37 steamers of 53,061 tons and 29 sailing ships, aggregate tonnage, 47,035 tons, were built.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal streams are the White Cart, the Black Cart, and the Gryffe, all of which ultimately unite and fall into the Clyde below Inchinnan Bridge; that is, about half-way down the river between Glasgow and Port Glasgow. The White Cart (which, by way of distinction, is generally denominated the Cart) rises at Eaglesham, in this county, and in the high grounds of East Kilbride, in Lanarkshire; and, passing Paisley in its course, joins the Gryffe at Inchinnan Bridge. The Black Cart issues from the loch of Castle Semple, in Lochwinnoch parish, and flowing northward falls in with the Gryffe at Walkinshaw. The Gryffe rises in the high grounds above Largs, and flows eastward until it meets the Black Cart; the Gryffe bestows the name of Strathgryfe upon the vale through which it flows. The lakes are Castle Semple Loch, Queenside Loch (in the parish of Lochwinnoch), two lochs in Neilston parish, and several smaller ones. The first-named (Castle Semple) is situate in the southern border of the county; its banks are beautifully wooded in some places, and it contains a small island, on which stand the ruins of a castle. The Glasgow and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway runs through the eastern portion of the county, leaving it at Lugton, the Caledonian railway running a line over the same ground, as far as Pollockshaws and thence trending eastward to East Kilbride, while through the centre of the county, by Paisley, Johnstone and Beith to Ayr, runs the main line of the Glasgow and South Western, with a branch from Paisley northward to the Clyde at Elderslie, and one from Johnstone by Bridge of Weir to Greenock. The Caledonian railway runs a line through Paisley and along the south bank of the Clyde, to Port Glasgow and Greenock, with a branch via Upper Greenock to Wemyss Bay, and the line from Glasgow to Yoker cuts through the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Renfrewshire comprehends 21 civil parishes and 41 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 15 others. It contains two representative burghs—Port Glasgow and Renfrew—which join with Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock in returning one member to Parliament. Greenock and Paisley each send a representative, and the county, under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, is separated into the East and West Divisions, and returns two members, instead of one as formerly. The Parliamentary constituency in 1894-5 was:—East Division, 10,811; West Division, 386. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 (exclusive of railways and public undertakings, £56,047) was £52,851.

ABBEY OF PAISLEY is a parish and head of poor combination, containing the manufacturing towns of Barrhead, Johnstone and Paisley. The White Cart water flows through the north-eastern part of the parish, which contains the abbey, for which see Paisley. Ferguslie Park, the seat of Sir Thomas Glen Glen-Coats bart. D.L.; Johnstone Castle, the seat of George Ludovic Houston esq. D.L., J.P. and Hawkhead House, the property of Lord Glasgow, but now occupied by William Stevenson esq. are all in this parish. The area of the entire parish is 15,924 acres; rateable value, £ ; the population in 1881 was 34,393, and in 1891, 42,887, of which Paisley had 25,312, Barrhead, 1,162, and Johnstone, 6,745.

Elderslie is a quoad sacra parish and village within the landward part of the Abbey parish of Paisley, about half a mile distant from Johnstone, and 2½ miles west from Paisley, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Cotton spinning and the manufacturing of carpets is carried on here, and at Glenpatrick, a short distance away, is a distillery. The village has acquired considerable interest, from the fact of its having at one time been the residence of the renowned Wallace. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,353, and in the village, 1,468

Hurlet and Nitshill are small villages both in Abbey parish, and 3 miles south-east from Paisley, on the Glasgow road. Nitshill has a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock line of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and also large chemical works, and lime, asbestos and iron works. The population of Hurlet in 1891 was 344, and of Nitshill, 1,068.

Inkerman and Balaclava are mining villages in Abbey parish, between 2 and 3 miles west from Paisley, which sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and named in commemoration of two noted battles of that campaign. The population has decreased because of the decline in the mining industry; the population of Inkerman village in 1891 was 699.

BARRHEAD is a town, police burgh and quoad sacra parish in the parishes of Abbey (Paisley) and Neilston, and in Paisley small debt court district and Paisley poor combination, with a station at Grahamston on the Glasgow and Grangemouth section of the North British railway and Glasgow and Stirling line of the Caledonian railway, 4 miles south-south-east from Paisley and 7 south-west from Glasgow. The town consists chiefly of one principal street, with several smaller ones diverging from it; it is lighted with gas by a limited company, and, together with the suburbs of Grahamston and Dunterlie, is the centre of a manufacturing and thickly populated neighbourhood. It was constituted a police burgh in 1892, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine commissioners. In the district are several large bleach fields, a number of extensive calico printing establishments and mills for cotton spinning and power loom weaving, besides collieries, engineering works and iron foundries. Here also are the sanitary engineering works of Messrs. Shanks and Co. There are branches in the town of the Bank of Scotland, and also of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. There is a Mechanics' Institute, with an extensive library attached. The trustees of Z. Heys, South Arthurlie, Mrs. Glen, Carlibar, and Henry Barclay Dunlop esq. J.P., D.L. of Arthurlie, are the chief landowners. The area is 12,481 acres: the population of the town in 1881 was 7,495, and in 1891, 8,215; of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 7,359.

BEITH, a parish, formerly partly in this county, has, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," been entirely transferred to Ayrshire.

BISHOPTON, see ERSKINE.

BLACKHALL, see ABBEY.

BRIDGE OF WEIR is a village and is a quoad sacra parish, formed from the civil parishes of Houston and Kilbarchan, 1 mile from Houston and 3 from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The old part of the village is situate in the parish of Houston, and the new part in the parish of Kilbarchan, through which flows the river Gryffe. The New Orphan Homes of Scotland, erected under the superintendence of William Quarrier esq. at a cost of about £90,000, are about a mile and a half from the village. The Established church here was erected at a cost of £3,000, and will seat 500 persons. The population of the village in 1881 was 1,267, and in 1891, 1,646; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,760.

BUSBY, see MEARNS.

CATHCART is a town and parish, in the small debt court district of Paisley, 3 miles south from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Its original designation was Caer-Cart, i.e., the Castle on the river Cart; and the White Cart flows through the parish, which is of some extent, and though now wholly in this county, was formerly partly in Lanarkshire, its boundaries having been considerably modified by transfers made under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," by boundary orders 137 and 140, by which the town (and police burgh) of Crosshills, now included in Glasgow, and a large portion of suburban Glasgow, with populations respectively of 3,798 and 8,159, were transferred to Lanarkshire. The parish of Cathcart is almost wholly arable, but here are the engineering works of Messrs. Geo. and James Weir Limited. Margarine, paper, pasteboard, snuff and gelatine dry plates for photographic purposes are also manufactured, and a great proportion of the inhabitants are engaged in agriculture. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 850 persons. The Free church seats 650 persons. The Couper Institute, a stone building erected in 1887, at a cost of about £6,000, was presented to the parish by the late Robert Couper, of Millholm. The field of Langside, in this parish, is remarkable for being the scene of the last fruitless effort of the unfortunate Mary to regain her crown, 13th May, 1568; on the defeat of her army by the troops of the Regent Murray, she took to flight, and crossing the Solway Firth, landed at Workington, in Cumberland, on the 16th of the same month. An eminence is still pointed out where the queen stood during the engagement. The old castle of Cathcart, a conspicuous ruin, occupies a commanding position, defended on two sides by the Cart, to which there is a deep and almost perpendicular descent: it belonged to the Lords of Cathcart, and has been dismantled over a century. John Gordon, James Stewart, of Willamwood, and Sir John Stirling Maxwell bart. of Keir, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish before the transfers to Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, comprised 2,667 acres, and as the portions transferred were parts of towns, it is not much reduced in size; rateable value is £113,315; the population after the transfers in 1891 was 4,552, of which the town of Old Cathcart contained 2,511.

Clarkston is a village in this parish, 2 miles south from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1891 was 825.

DUNLOP is a parish, formerly partly in this county, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" it is now entirely included in the county of Ayr.

EAGLESHAM is a parish and modern village in Paisley small debt court district and poor law combination, 9 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, and 11 south-south-east from Paisley, about a mile to the north-west of the old castle of Polnoon and 2½ miles from Thornton Hall station on the Glasgow and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway. A tributary of the river White Cart runs through the village, that river forming the eastern boundary of the parish, which is bounded on the north-west by the Earn water. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. sections 44 to 50) boundary order 75, a part of East Kilbride parish in Renfrew county, without population, has been added to this parish. The old village was demolished in 1769, but was shortly afterwards rebuilt under the direction of Archibald, 11th Earl of Eglintoun, who also, in 1790, erected the church, an octagonal structure, with an elegant steeple, containing a good clock and a fine-toned bell. The old castle of Polnoon was built with money received by Sir John Montgomerie from the Percy family, in ransom for Sir Henry Percy, better known as "Hotspur," who was taken prisoner by Sir John at the battle of Otterburn or Chevy Chase 10 Aug. 1388, hence the name Polnoon, "Poind Money." Ballageich, one of the highest points in Renfrewshire, 1,084 feet high, is in this parish, and on the side of the Ballageich Hill is the spot called "The Queen's Seat," the tradition being that Mary Queen of Scots rested there on her flight after the battle of Langside, 13 May 1568. Blackwood Hill, 1,000 feet in height, is in this parish, which also contains three small lochs. Eaglesham House is the seat of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. A flower show is held in place of the old fair on the third Thursday of August. The barony of Eaglesham was in the Montgomerie family, Earls of Eglinton, from the year 1250, but is now the property of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. who is the chief landowner. The area of the parish is 15,666 acres; rateable value, £15,300; the population in 1881 was 1,385, and in 1891, 1,207, of which the village contained 786.

EASTWOOD is a parish, to the south of Govan, and contains the towns of Pollokshaws and Thornliebank, particulars of which are contained in the Glasgow section; it also contained a portion of suburban Glasgow, but this, with a population of 2,298, was, under the provisions of the "Local Government Act (Scotland), 1889" and by boundary order 140, transferred to the county of Lanark. The kirktown of Eastwood lies about a mile south of Pollokshaws, and through the parish, the extent of which is 3 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 broad, runs the Kilmarnock and Beith section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway, with stations at Crossmyloof, Pollokshaws and Nitshill.

Giffnock is a village in Eastwood parish and has a station on the Glasgow, Kilbride and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway.

The original area of the parish was 5,596 acres, and the population after the transfer in 1891 was 13,744, of which 10,405 were in Pollokshaws and 2,097 in Thornliebank; rateable value, £64,455. The Glasgow portion (Lanarkshire) population, 2,298.

ELDERSLIE, see ABBEY.

ERSKINE is a parish, 6 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and is situate on the Clyde, about 6 miles north-west from Paisley, in the small debt court district of Paisley. The ground rises gently from the river, and is laid out in rich plantations, orchards and corn fields. At this point is a ferry, said to be the oldest on the Clyde. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a fine square tower, and has sittings for about 750 persons. A very fine memorial has been erected here to Lieut.-Gen. Robert Walter, 11th Lord Blantyre C.B. who died Sept. 23rd, 1830. Erskine House, the seat of Lord Blantyre, is a beautiful mansion seated amidst tasteful pleasure grounds facing the Clyde. Lord Blantyre, the Earl of Home, Col. Sir David Carrick Robert Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B. of Drumpellier, and William Houston esq. of Rossland, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,535 acres; rateable value, £19,343 17s.1d.; the population in 1891 was 1,691, and in 1881, 1,653.

Bishopton is a small village in this parish, on the Glasgow and Greenock road, 12 miles west-south-west from the former place and 10½ east-south-east from the latter, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Brick making is carried on to some extent.

GOUROCK is a seaport town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Inverkip, and in the small debt court district of Greenock, 3 miles west from Greenock, 25 west from Glasgow and 69 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and there is a tramway from Greenock, opened in July, 1873. The town is beautifully situated on the south side of a fine bay of the river Clyde, and is lighted with gas. The haven affords excellent anchorage ground, and vessels to and from Glasgow, Port Glasgow and Greenock frequently put in here; the quay was constructed at a cost of about £5,000, and has a depth of nine feet at low water. The town, which is upwards of a mile in length, has become a fashionable resort for families from Glasgow and other places during the summer. Gourock was incorporated as a burgh of barony by a charter from William and Mary, dated the 24th of April, 1694, the privileges of which are very extensive and include the right to hold a weekly market and two annual fairs. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. The original chapel; built in 1773, was replaced in 1832 by a new structure, with a handsome tower and clock. The Gamble Institute, opened in 1876, was built and endowed by Mrs. Gamble, of Ashburn, at a cost of about £8,000, and contains a public hall, reading room and library, bath rooms &c. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Duncan Darroch esq. J.P., D.L. of Torridon, is lord of the barony of Gourock and the principal landowner. Rateable value, £32,753; the population in 1891 was 4,475, and in 1881, 3,336.

GREENOCK.

GREENOCK is a seaport and municipal and parliamentary borough, and the head of a poor combination, in the western division of the county, 22 miles west from Glasgow, 15 west from Paisley, 66 west from Edinburgh, and 419 from London, with stations on the Glasgow and South-Western, Caledonian and Wemyss Bay railways. The town stands on the south bank of the Clyde, and comprehends three parishes, respectively called the West parish, the Mid parish, and the East parish, all formed out of, and separated from, the original parish of Innerkip. The first, which may be styled the mother parish of the three, includes the western part of the town and the greater proportion of the country district, and the east includes part of the town of Port Glasgow. Under the Improvement Act, considerable parts of the older districts of the town were cleared and rebuilt at a cost of £150,000.

The wide thoroughfare leading up to the "Benians," a hill at the west end of the town, overlooking the river, and known as Lyle road, was formed in 1878, at a cost of about £17,000. From the top of this road a very extensive view of the Clyde is afforded from Bowling to Dunoon.

The Esplanade, constructed at a cost of about £20,000, extends from the foot of Campbell street, in a noble sweep, of about a mile and a quarter, along the shore of the Firth of Clyde, and is protected by a substantial sea wall, with palisades, and provided with numerous landing places and seats, and is ornamented with a fountain, erected as a memorial to Galt, the novelist.

The town is lighted with gas, from works the property of the Corporation, erected on Inch Green Island, at the east end of the burgh.

The water supply is derived from an artificial lake, 2 miles long and half a mile wide, with a depth of 60 feet, and an elevation of 500 feet above the level of the sea, and formed by constructing an immense dam across a valley, through which a small stream originally ran; this great undertaking was completed in 1827 by the Shaws Water Company, but is now the property of the Corporation, by whom it was acquired in 1864, and since then the Gryfe reservoir, the water from which is chiefly used for domestic purposes, has been added. The water from the lake is also available for a large number of mills, including those of The Clyde Sugar Refinery, the works of which have a water wheel 70 feet in diameter, with buckets 12 feet in breadth, and a water power equal to 240 horses.

Greenock, in the early part of the 18th century, was a small village, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and without quay or harbour: it now, however, possesses several harbours, and in the Clyde, just off the port, is a large sandbank, extending to half a mile above Port Glasgow, the west end of which, known as the Tail of the Bank, affords the best anchorage ground in the Firth, and is the regular station of the port guardship.

The various harbours and docks are as follows:—

1. The Mid harbour, the original harbour of the port, constructed during the last century, and about 8 acres in extent. 2. The East India harbour, formed early in the present century, and covering about 5 acres. 3. The Victoria harbour, extending over 6 acres, constructed at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1850. This harbour is particularly well suited for vessels of large tonnage, and has a crane capable of lifting 80 tons, so that steamers of the largest class may have their engines fitted without touching the ground. 4. The Albert harbour, about 11 acres in extent, constructed at a cost, including quays, of £200,000, and opened in 1860. The Princess pier, west of this harbour, about 1,600 feet long, was erected at a cost of £70,000, and opened in 1870, and has direct communication with the Glasgow and South-Western railway. 5. The James Watt wet dock, opened in 1886; it was designed by Mr. Walter R. Kinipple C.E. of Greenock and Westminster, and is upwards of 2,000 feet in length, 32 feet in depth, and 400 feet in width, and is capable of receiving the largest vessels afloat. There are large warehouses on the margin of the quays for grain and other merchandise, with elevators and hoists of the most improved description worked by hydraulic power. 6. The Tidal harbour, outside the wet dock, where timber vessels can be discharged, and coal and pig iron shipped, is 50 acres in extent. 7. The oldest of the public graving docks, at the Mid harbour, built in 1780, and adapted for vessels 150 feet in length, and drawing 10 feet. 8. Another graving dock, at the East India harbour, 300 feet in length, 16 feet in depth and 40 feet wide on the sill. 9. The third, or Garvel dock, a recent work, constructed at a cost of £120,000; it is 600 feet in length, 20 feet in depth, and 60 feet in width on the sill. There are also 2 private docks, belonging to Messrs. Caird and Co. Limited, and Scott & Co. shipbuilders. The various docks and warehouses being connected both with the Caledonian and Glasgow and South-Western railways, ample means are afforded of receiving and distributing goods to all parts of the country.

In 1894 the number of sailing vessels entering the port of Greenock, including their repeated voyages, from foreign countries, was 51, with a tonnage of 53,664, and from British possessions 35, with a tonnage of 30,444. Of steam vessels there were 111 of 85,529 tons from the former and 11 with a tonnage of 14,431 from the latter. The total of sailing vessels which cleared was 77—of this number 50 were foreign and 27 British—and of steam, 73, 64 foreign and 9 British. Of the sailing and steam vessels entering and clearing coastwise with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, there were 6,312, with a tonnage of 968,182, in the general coasting trade, and 1,198 of 356,622 in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland. Of those entering and clearing in ballast, there were 4 British, with a tonnage of 6,207, and only 1 foreign, of 1,496 tons. In 1894 the number of vessels registered under the Merchant Shipping Acts belonging to the port was 189 sailing and 113 steam, with a total tonnage of 299,263. In 1894, 948 fishing boats, of an aggregate tonnage of 2,772 tons, and employing 3,581 hands, registered under the "Sea Fisheries Act. 1868," besides 311 other vessels, aggregating 299,263 tons, and 12 steamers, equal to 29,735 tons, and 5 sailing ships to 5,524 tons, were built here during the same year. The boundaries of the port, as fixed in 1861, include part of the Clyde, and Mull, Tiree, Coll, Muck, Egg, Rum, Cana and others of the western islands. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters G. K.

Among the most important industrial works here are four large shipbuilding establishments, some of the yards being so complete as to rank second only to those belonging to the Crown. Most of the fine steamers belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company have been built here. Since the opening of commercial intercourse with India and China, the merchants of this port have prosecuted the trade to those countries with great spirit, the Clyde steamers, from the superiority of their construction, never failing to secure a preference of engagements. Large and elegant steamboats leave this port for London, Liverpool, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, the Isle of Man, Campbelltown, Ayr, Inverness and other places in the Highlands, at stated periods, and there are many others plying on the Clyde only. The steamers carrying the Irish mails are also dispatched from this port. There are several extensive engine works, marine and otherwise, and iron foundries, rope-walks, tan yards, and extensive sugar and glucose refineries, manufactories for woollen and sail cloth, and large mills for spinning wool and flax and for making paper.

About a mile west from Greenock, and on the Clyde, is a pier and also a torpedo battery, constructed for protecting the river and its traffic. In the vicinity are several very agreeable bathing villages, one of which is seated under the mountains on the opposite side of the Firth, at this point several miles across. Steamboats ply to and from the different villages during the bathing season.

The burgh is divided for municipal purposes into 8 wards, and the government is vested in a provost, 6 bailies, a town treasurer, a dean of guild and 16 councillors.

Greenock was constituted a parliamentary burgh in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

The old town offices, taken down to make way for the new buildings, were designed in 1760 by the father of James Watt, the famous engineer, who was at that time one of the bailies of the town.

The present municipal buildings, which stand in the centre of the town, were erected from designs by Messrs. Barclay, architects, of Glasgow, at a cost of £120,000, and contain a spacious town hall, seating 2,000 persons, and the various departments connected with the Corporation and Harbour Trust.

The County Buildings, in Nelson street, contain the sheriff and other courts, and apartments for the necessary officers connected therewith, and a further portion serves as a gaol.

The Custom House, the north front of which faces the water, with a fine open space extending to the quay, is a building in the Classic style, from designs by Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh, and in it the business of the customs and inland revenue is transacted.

The Watt Institution, in Union street, occupies a site given for the purpose of a library and art gallery, by the late Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart bart. and was erected from a design by Mr. Blore, architect, of London, at a cost of upwards of £7,000. Within the entrance is a statue of Watt, executed by Chantrey, at a cost of £2,000.

The Mechanics' Institute, in Sir Michael street, has also a good library and news room.

The McLean Museum, in Kelly street, presented to the town by the late James McLean, saw miller, of Greenock, was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and besides a large collection of objects of interest from all parts of the world, it contains some fine models of the large steamships built at Greenock, and other models of steam engines and sugar making machinery.

The News Room, in William street, is well supplied with papers and magazines, and is also used for the meetings of the Greenock Chamber of Commerce.

The Theatre Royal in West Blackhall street, a comfortable and well-appointed place of amusement, was opened in 1858.

The Post Office, in Wallace square, was erected by the Corporation, and is leased by the Post Office authorities.

The Public Baths are in the same building as the Mechanics' Institute, the entrance being in Tobago street.

A Poor House and Lunatic Asylum, at Smithston, about a mile out of the town, was erected at a cost of over £80,000.

There are several charitable institutions, the finest amongst which, as a building, is Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Asylum, an institution founded by the late Commissary General Sir Gabriel Wood K.T. a native of Greenock, for the relief and comfort of aged and decayed master mariners and merchant seamen.

The Infirmary, originally erected in 1809, has been considerably enlarged; it is ornamental as a public edifice, and its utility is universally acknowledged.

The Buchanan Night Asylum, built at the cost of the late J. C. Buchanan, merchant, of Greenock, affords both food and shelter to poor persons, and there is also a Sailors' Home.

The West parish church, in Nelson street, is a modern structure. The old church, which stands within its burial ground near the shore, was for some years in a ruinous condition, but has been repaired; the churchyard is the resting place of Burns's "Highland Mary," over whose grave a monument has been erected.

The Mid parish comprehends the central part of the town: the church, in Cathcart square, is an elegant structure, with a lofty steeple.

The East parish church is in Regent street.

The cemetery, which belongs to the Corporation, is about 130 acres in extent, and is beautifuly laid out.

Greenock Academy is a large establishment for both sexes, under the supervision of a rector, and together with 11 public elementary schools, is under the control of the school board.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Company Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Provident Savings Bank.

Two newspapers are published here, the "Greenock Herald" and the "Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette."

The Well Park, in Regent street, is a small but well laid out recreation ground, overlooking the town, and approached from Cathcart street by a series of terraces, and on a clear day fine views of the Clyde and the Argyllshire hills may be obtained.

Wellington Park, situated near the Drumfrochar road, was formally opened June, 1872, the ground presented to the town by Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. is of considerable extent; the lower and more level portion contains bowling, cricket and playing grounds, while the more elevated parts afford space for pleasant rambles, and very fine views are also here presented of the town, the Firth, and surrounding scenery.

Connected with the town are various rowing, cricket and bowling clubs, all of which are well supported, and the grounds and bowling greens are kept in excellent order.

Greenock is the birthplace of the illustrious James Watt LL.D., F.R.S. the perfecter of the steam engine, who was born here 19 January, 1736, and died at Heathfield, Birmingham, 25 August, 1819.

John Galt, the biographer and novelist, who was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, 2 May, 1779, lived for several years in Greenock, and dying 11 April, 1839, was buried here.

The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are two annual fairs, one taking place on the first Thursday in July, the other on the fourth Tuesday of November, and horse and cattle markets twice a year—on the Friday before Glasgow Whit-Monday fair, and on the Friday immediately preceding Kilbarchan fair.

The area comprises 2,401 acres; rateable value, £373,140; the population of the town in 1891 was 63,423, and in 1881, 66,704; the population of 1891 was made up of 19,166 in the East parish, 5,311 in the Middle and 39,035 in the West; 2,735 in the East parish, forms part of the population of the town of Port Glasgow, and the total for 1881 was 69,238, less 2,422 in Port Glasgow.

Post, Money Order & Telegraph Office, Wallace square; William K. Bryson, postmaster. Deliveries, 6.45, 8 & 11.30 a.m. & 2.15, 4.30 & 7.45 p.m.; dispatches, 3.30 & 10.15 a.m. & 4.30, 5.30 & 7.40 p.m

HOUSTON and KILLELAN form a united parish in the Paisley small debt court district, and is about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. It is bounded on the east and north by the Dargavel brook, and south by the river Gryfe.

Houston (or Houstoun) village is on the Houston burn, 14 miles west from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Paisley, and the like distance south-east from Port Glasgow, with a station 3½ miles east on the Paisley and Greenock section of the Caledonian railway, and another at Houston-Crosslee, about 2 south, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving and embroidering. The parish church, originally of very early date, was rebuilt in 1874 by the Speirs family, and is now an edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower containing one bell; the interior contains an effigy to John Houston, dated 1456: there are sittings for 400 persons. Houston Castle, an ancient mansion, now no longer extant, stood to the east of the town, and was the residence of the knights of Houston, and demolished in 1780 by a proprietor of the estate. Houston House is the seat of Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. and stands in a large park. The principal landowners are John C. Cuninghame esq. of Craigends, and A. A. Speirs esq. The area of the united parish is 7,584 acres; the population in 1881 was 2,191, and in 1891, 1,946; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,389, and of the village of Houston, 498.

About a mile hence is Crosslee, the prosperity of which has greatly suffered owing to the destruction by fire of a large cotton mill, in which many hands were employed. The population in 1891 was 379.

INCHINNAN is a parish to the north-west of Renfrew, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is watered by the rivers Clyde, White Cart and Gryffe. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches, forming a communication with Renfrew; vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde pass this bridge by means of a canal, which is spanned by an iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. The parish church, built in 1828, on the site of a church of the Knights Templars, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and has a tower containing one bell; the organ was presented by Lord Blythswood in 1886; there are marble tablets to the late Mr. Campbell, of Blythswood, and a younger brother, and to the late William Fulton, of Park Inchinnan: the church affords sittings for 320 persons. In the churchyard is the burying-place of the Campbells, of Blythswood. Lord Blythswood, of Blythswood, is the chief landowner. Acreage, 3,330; rateable value, £6,009; population in 1881, 508, and in 1891, 567.

INVERKIP is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Greenock, 4 miles south-west from Greenock, with a station on the Caledonian railway; it is situated on the Kipp water, which intersects the parish from east to west, and falls into the Clyde, and the Daff and other rivulets flow through the district, and at some points form small cascades. Ardgowan House, the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. pleasantly situated on a kind of peninsula, a little north of the village, is a fine modern building, surrounded with beautiful and romantic pleasure grounds. The parish church is a neat edifice, and has a tower with spire containing a clock. Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 12,549; rateable value, £8,347; the population in 1891 was 6,541 in the civil parish (which includes 4,475 in Gourock town); of the ecclesiastical parish, 885, and of the village, 526.

JOHNSTONE is a town and police burgh, in the Abbey parish of Paisley and in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 3½ miles west from Paisley, 10 west-south-west from Glasgow, 8 north-north-east from Beith and 14 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The Glasgow, Paisley and Johnstone canal, 11 miles in length, was opened in 1810. In the neighbourhood are two large cotton mills, a large paper mill, iron foundries, engineering, machine and tool manufactories &c. The extensive linen thread mills of Messrs. Finlayson, Bousfield and Co. situated here, give employment to over 2,000 hands, and near the town are valuable iron, coal and shale mines. The town, which is lighted with gas and well supplied with water, is very regularly laid out, and has two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven commissioners. The burgh buildings, in Collier street, erected at a cost of £2,000, and opened 28th September, 1888, include a spacious court room, well fitted and ornamented with the coat of arms of the burgh in relief: in the Commissioners' room is a full-length portrait of Sir William Milliken Napier bart. (d. 4 Feb. 1852), presented to him by his tenants, and given to the burgh by Sir Archibald Lennox Napier bart. in November, 1887: there is also a portrait of Mr. James Reid, the first town clerk of the burgh, 1857-93. The Johnstone Working Men's Institute includes a news room and a public hall holding 1,000 people and containing an organ, the gift of Mr. Bousfield, of this place; there is also a Mechanics' Institute, and various friendly societies. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Horse fairs are held on the Thursday after the second Monday of July and first Friday in January, and a cattle and pleasure fair in the middle of July, which lasts for three days. George Ludovic Houston esq. of Johnstone Castle, and Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. Elderslie House, are the chief landowners. Acreage of the burgh, 300; rateable value, £33,213; the population in 1891 was 9,668, and was in 1893, 10.127, in accordance with a deliverance of the sheriff of the county in terms of "The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892."

KILBARCHAN is a parish, town and burgh of barony, in the small debt court district of Paisley, 1½ miles west from Johnstone, and about 5 west from Paisley, with a station at Milliken Park on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The manufacture of silk, cotton, shawls, robes &c. is largely carried on here. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1846. The parish church, built in 1720, is a plain edifice of stone, with a belfry tower at the north-east angle, containing a clock; there are sittings for 900 persons. There are two public libraries containing several thousand volumes, and a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. A horse fair is held annually on the first Tuesday in December (old style). The School-house has a tower, on which is a statue, executed by Archibald Robertson, sculptor, of Greenock, of Habbie Simpson, the well-known Scotch piper, who was born in this parish. Ranfurly Castle, now in ruins, is 1½ miles west of Kilbarchan village. Milliken House, formerly the seat of the late Sir Robert Napier, is now (1896) the property of Daniel Mackenzie esq. Craigends, on the bank of the river Gryfe, 3 miles north-west of Johnstone, is the seat of John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. and Merchiston House, 1 mile north-west of Johnstone, is the seat of James Finlayson esq. D.L., J.P. John C. Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P.; Robert Thomas Napier Speir esq. D.L., J.P. of Blackstoun, and James Widdrington Shand-Harvey esq. D.L., J.P. of Castle Semple, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,006 acres; rateable value, £39,022; the population in 1891 was 7,111, including 2,747 in the town, and in 1881, 6,868, with 2,548 in the town.

Clippens is a mining village in Kilbarchan parish, about 3 miles west from Paisley.

KILMALCOLM is a parish and village, on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, in Greenock small debt court district and Paisley poor combination, 10 miles north-west from Paisley, 7 south-east from Greenock and rather more than that distance in the same direction from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The district is intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and extends from the Clyde into the hilly country south of Port Glasgow, and takes its name from the cell founded here by St. Columba; in later times it was the burying place of the Earls of Glencairn. The hills rise to a considerable height; one known as the Laird's Seat is 1,084 feet high, and Hyndal Hill, 1,244 feet. The parish church, built about 1826, is a plain edifice of stone, with clock tower, and has sittings for 500 persons: in the church is a memorial to the Rev. Alexander Leck, a former minister, and a brass inscribed to the Cunninghames, Earls of Glencairn, a title which became dormant on the death of John, 15th earl, 24th September, 1796; they were for many generations owners of the lands of Finlaystone in this parish, and this memorial was erected in August, 1892, by their descendant Robert Bontine Cunninghame-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited, and an excellent hotel (the Buchanan Arms), close to the station. The Kilmalcolm Hydropathic Establishment and Sanitorium is a fine building, standing 450 feet above the sea level, and commands an extensive view: from the tower, Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi and the whole range of Cowal hills from the Gareloch on the Clyde to Goatfell in Arran are visible: the grounds extend to upwards of 22 acres. Duchal House, 2 miles south of the village, is the seat of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. lord-lieutenant of Renfrewshire, and near it are the ruins of Duchal Castle: in the neighbourhood is Divots or the Devil's Glen, containing some fine scenery and noted as being the place across which Sir William Wallace forced his horse to leap when escaping from the English. Finlaystone House is the seat of George Jardine Kidston esq. Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. of Ardgowan, Col. Sir David C. R. Carrick-Buchanan K.C.B. of Drumpellier, and Henry MacDowall esq. of Garthland and Carruth, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,665 acres; rateable value, £32,000; the population in 1891 was 3,649, and in 1881, 2,708; the village having 1,634 in 1891 and 1,170 in 1881.

Post, Money Order & Telegraph Office & Savings Bank, Insurance & Annuity Office (Sub-Office. Letters should have S.O. Renfrewshire added); Miss Jane Sinclair, postmistress. Deliveries, 7 & 9 a.m. & 3 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 8.30 a.m. & 12.15, 5.15 & 7.15 p.m

LOCHWINNOCH is a parish and large village in the Paisley small debt court district, 15½ miles south-west from Glasgow, 8½ south-south-west from Paisley, 6½ south-south-west from Johnstone and 3½ north from Beith, with a station, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its name, and is surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, including the banks of the Calder, the cataract of Reekan Linn, Gurratt's Linn, the Calder Glen, and the remains of several ancient castles. The lake, which stretches north and south, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart river; it is now about 2 miles in length by 1 in breadth though formerly much more extensive, but has been divided by an embankment whereby several hundred acres of land have been reclaimed and brought into cultivation. The village is lighted with gas by a company. There are three extensive cabinet and chair manufactories, which together give employment to a large number of hands, a bleach-field &c. There is also a branch here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The parish church, built about 1825, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower and spire, and affords sittings for about 750 persons. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Tuesday of each month. An annual fair, called the "Fair of Hill," is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). Castle Semple House, the seat of James Widdrington Shand-Harvey esq. on the north-west shore of the loch, occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about 1500; it was demolished in 1735. Garthland, is the residence of Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. On a small island in the lake is the "Peel," the remains of some forgotten stronghold of which nothing but a vault now exists. James W. Shand-Harvey esq. D.L., J.P Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. Robert W. Cochran-Patrick esq. D.L., J.P., LL.D., F.S.A. of Beith and David Richardson esq. of Hartfield, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,507 acres; rateable value, £28,545; the parish in 1891 contained a population of 3,477, of whom 1,413 were in the village, and in 1881, 3,369, with 1,192 in the village.

How-wood is a small village in the parish of Lochwinnoch and 3½ miles north-east from the village, on the high road between Beith and Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood are two bleach works. About a mile and a half nearer to Lochwinnoch, and in that parish, is the small village of New Town of Beltrees. In 1881, How-wood had a population of 333, and in 891, 420.

MEARNS is a parish and village, in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 7 miles south from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Paisley, and about 3½ south-west from Clarkston station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and is 7 miles in length by about three in breadth. The surface of the land is finely diversified by undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has also been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton Mearns, joins the former one, near the Logans Well. The parish is irrigated by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly 2½ miles in circumference. In the parish are several bleachfields and calico printing works. Mearns Castle, which stands on a rocky height near the village, now consists chiefly of a large square tower in a dismantled condition, but commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect; it is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been once secured by a drawbridge. It belongs to Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart bart. Pollok Castle stands about 2 miles north-west of the village on the road to Pollokshaws. James Crawford Fergusson Pollok esq. of Pollok Castle, and Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. of Ardgowan, are the principal landowners. The parish, which embraces 10,281 acres; rateable value, £24,957; in 1881 contained a population of 3,965, and in 1891, 3,426.

Newton Mearns (or Newton) is a village in Mearns parish, 3 miles south-west from Giffnock. Here is the parish church, an edifice of stone with a tower and spire containing a clock. The church affords 700 sittings. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and a good inn.

Busby is a small village in this parish, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway, and is 6 miles south from Glasgow. Calico printing and bleaching are carried on here, and there is a chemical manufactory.

MILLIKEN PARK, see KILBARCHAN.

NEILSTON is a parish and village, in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, 9 miles south-west from Glasgow, 9 north-north-east from Stewarton, 5 south from Paisley and 2 south-west from Barrhead, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and Kilmarnock joint railways. The village is situated on the river Leven, on the road to Irvine. The parish is 8 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth, and is traversed by a ridge of hills extending through its entire length. There are two small lakes, called Loch Lebo and Loch Long. From the former issues the Lugton, a tributary of the Garnock. The parish contains part of the town of Barrhead. In or near the village are bleachfields and printworks, and a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The parish church, built in 1788, has a tower with clock, and will seat 889 persons. Arthurlee is the seat of Henry Barclay Dunlop esq. J.P., D.L.; Fereneze, of Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. J.P., D.L. and Caldwell House, of William Mure esq. D.L. Alex. Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. of Elderslie; William Mure esq. and H. B. Dunlop esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,481 acres; rateable value, £41,616; the population in 1891 was 11,374, of whom 7,053 were in Barrhead and 2,113 in the village, and in 1881 the total was 11,359, including 6,448 in Barrhead and 2,311 in the village.

PAISLEY.

PAISLEY, generally supposed to have been the "Vanduara" of Ptolemy, is a town, burgh of barony and parliamentary burgh, the head of a poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, in the Western division of the county, and in the civil parishes of Paisley High church, Low, and Middle church and part of Paisley Abbey parish, the latter containing also part of the town of Barrhead; it is 53 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, about 7 south-by-west from Glasgow and 17 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway, built at a cost of £150,000. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a wide and fertile plain, known by the name of the "Carse of Renfrewshire," extends itself) is agreeably diversified. The town occupies a healthy and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about 3 miles above the confluence of that river with the Clyde, and consists of two portions: the burgh, or Old Town of Paisley, on the western side of the river, and the New Town on the eastern side. The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the New, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and three of these running parallel to each other, from east to west, are of great length. The New Town occupies a level site on the eastern side of the Cart, and the entire length of both divisions can scarcely be less than 2 miles; the extreme breadth from north to south being at least 1½ miles; on the east, north and west are the suburbs of Williamsburgh, Dovesland, Lylesland, Carriage Hill, Charleston, Maxwellton, Ferguslie, Castlehead, Meikleriggs, Moss Vale and Millarston. A ridge of land forming a natural terrace runs through the town westward from the river for nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fortified camp, with which several minor stations on neighbouring eminences are believed to have had communication, these including Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead. Causeyside, one of the streets of the burgh, is also thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road, leading to or by the principal station.

Three bridges connect the Old Town with the New; the old stone bridge at the foot of High street has been widened and made to harmonise with its new neighbour; the other two, one of which is known as "Abercorn Bridge," are modern structures, and there is a single large arch carrying the railway across the river.

Between 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was made navigable from the Clyde to the town for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen, at an expense of £4,000, and in 1842 attempts were made to deepen it by means of dredging machines, but it was then found impracticable. This work has, however, since been accomplished, borrowing powers for the purpose up to £100,000 having been obtained from Parliament in 1885. Commodious quays have also been erected and the river is now navigable for vessels drawing 15 feet of water.

As a manufacturing town, Paisley is chiefly distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive production of thread. The earliest fabrics made here were coarse linen checks: to these succeeded textiles of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. About 1760, silk gauze then took the lead, and such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The produce of this article, together with sewing thread, lawn and linen gauze, amounted for the year 1784 to £579,000, and more than 26,000 persons were employed in their manufacture. The demand for gauze subsequently decreased, and muslin, cambric and cotton thread were made instead; the manufacture of silk and cotton shawls, scarfs and plaids composed of silk and merino wool began in 1805, and these still continue to exhibit in great perfection the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers. In Paisley and its neighbourhood there are also numerous thread and cotton spinning mills, bleaching and printing works, dyehouses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, a brewery, a distillery, soap, starch and corn flour manufactories, and a very extensive tannery.

Gas was first introduced in 1824, and the works, in Blackstoun road, are now the property of the Corporation; the town is also well supplied with water.

By a charter granted by James IV. in 1488, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The fourth centenary of Paisley as a burgh was celebrated in August, 1888. Her Majesty the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the late Prince Henry of Battenberg, graced the ceremony by her presence. This was the first visit of royalty to the town during the long period of 271 years.

By a proclamation under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts, 1833" (3 and 4 William IV. cc. 76-7) the town was divided into five wards.

The present municipal body consists of a provost, six bailies, a treasurer and sixteen councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal, and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace.

Paisley was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

The Town Hall, standing close to the river Cart, was erected at a cost of £100,000, wholly defrayed by Messrs. George A., James, William, and Stewart Clark, brothers, and was opened on the 30th January, 1882; the building includes a tower, containing a chime of bells playing 35 tunes, which are varied each day of the month. The fine organ was presented by Mrs. Clark, mother of the above, at a cost of about £5,000.

The Municipal Buildings, formerly the County Buildings, form an embattled structure, with towers and turrets.

The county gaol, now used as a bridewell, and including a chapel erected in 1820, stands in rear of the municipal buildings, from which it is separated by two courtyards.

The County Buildings, in St. James street, next the Sheriff Court House, were opened in 1890, and are in the Classic style, from designs by Messrs. Clark & Bell, architects, of Glasgow. The edifice is two storeys in height, and has a central pedimented portico supported on columns of the Ionic order, and adorned with a frieze executed by F. W. Pomeroy esq. of London. The building contains the county hall, with committee rooms, offices for the county clerk, county road clerk, medical officer for the county, sanitary inspectors, county assessor and chief constable and head quarters for the county police, with cells; there is also a justice of the peace court hall and offices for the clerk.

The Sheriff Court House, in St. James street, erected at a cost of £15,000, and opened June 30, 1885, is an edifice in the Italian style, and includes a court hall holding about 300 persons, and rooms for the magistrates, jurors, reporters &c. There is also special accommodation for witnesses, and retiring rooms for both judge and jury, besides offices &c. for the sheriff clerk and procurator fiscal.

The Free Library and Museum was the gift to the town of the late Sir Peter Coats kt. J.P., F.R.S.E. of Woodside (d. 1890).

The Coats Observatory is in Oakshaw street.

The Government School of Design, in Gilmour street, was erected in 1847.

Public reading rooms for the working classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town.

The Infirmary is in Bridge street, and adjoining it is a Fever Hospital belonging to the Corporation, and under the supervision of the medical officers of the Infirmary, with a special staff of nurses.

The Lunatic Asylum is arranged to hold 98 patients.

The Burgh or Riccartsbar Asylum is a large building occupying an elevated position on the south side of the town.

The Workhouse, erected in 1850, in the upper part of the town, is in the Elizabethan style, and available for 655 inmates.

The Abbey Church of St. James, St. Milburga and St. Mirin, is the parish church of an extensive rural district lying around the town, and called the "parish of the abbey of Paisley." The church was originally 251 feet in length, with a central tower 90 feet high, and an elegant choir, without aisles, 123 feet long and 23 feet wide; as now existing, it consists only of the nave, with aisles, north transept, north porch, with parviae, and a small but lofty chapel on the south side: the choir has almost entirely disappeared, only a few feet of the height of its walls remaining above ground: within the choir lie the remains of King Robert III. d. 4 April, 1406, and also of Margaret, his daughter, wife of Archibald, 4th Earl of Douglas, over which a slab of Sicilian marble has been placed by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in commemoration of her visit to Paisley in 1888. The extant portion of the church is almost entirely Early English; the nave, of six bays, 93 by about 60 feet, has triforium and clerestory, and the west front is arranged in three stages; the lowermost has a recessed doorway of seven orders, flanked by blind lancets, all the arch mouldings being relieved with dog-tooth ornament; in the second stage are two lofty Decorated windows, of three lights each, with Geometrical tracery; the gable is lighted by a similar window of five lights, and over it is a quatrefoil; the whole is flanked by tall and narrow buttresses and square turrets, and at the western angles of the aisles are other turrets, with spired caps: the groined roof, 82 feet high, is now concealed by a coved ceiling: the transept is roofless, but retains its window tracery: the chapel on the south side, built in 1499, and dedicated to Saints Columba and Mirin, is Perpendicular and is now used as a place of sepulture for the Hamilton family, Dukes of Abercorn. The remarkable degree of resonance possessed by this little building, and which is still, on this account, called the sounding aisle, has been magnified by most writers. Much of the effect which it formerly produced is now, however, lost, from the re-construction within the chapel in 1820 of a large altar tomb, with recumbent female effigy, believed to represent Marjory, daughter of Robert the Bruce, wife of Walter, 6th High Steward of Scotland, and mother of Robert II.; she died in 1316. The aperture in the brickwork formed to close up the interstices of a once beautiful eastern window, likewise contributed to weaken the echo. The nave, which is the only portion now in use, is neatly fitted up, and contains some curious monuments and sepulchral inscriptions, and on the south side are four Decorated sedilia and a piscina; a number of stained windows have also been erected as memorials by families in the town and district.

The High church, which stands on a fine eminence, called Church hill, laid out on its northern slope in gardens, was built in 1754 at a cost of £1,600, and renovated in 1877 at an expense of £4,400, and will seat 1,313 persons.

St. George's church, built in 1820 at a cost of £6,183, was renovated in 1894 and has sittings for 1,300 persons.

The North church, in Love street, built in 1834, and rebuilt in 1889, is a plain building of stone in the Gothic style, and has sittings for 725 persons.

The Middle Parish church, on Church hill, built in 1781, was renovated in 1885 and affords 924 sittings.

St. Columba's or the Gaelic church, in Oakshaw street, is a very plain stone building erected in 1793, and will seat 1,100 persons.

The Coats Memorial Baptist church was erected in memory of Thomas Coats esq. a local philanthropist.

The John Neilson Educational Institution, Oakshawhead, richly endowed by the late John Neilson esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1862, and is a massive structure, occupying an elevated site, and surmounted by a lofty dome.

The Technical School, now (1896) about to be erected in George street, at an estimated cost of £17,000, has been designed by Mr. T. G. Abercrombie, architect, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and exhibits a facade 120 feet in length, and three storeys high, arranged as a central block with slightly advanced wings, and an open lantern of several stages, rising from the ridge of the roof. On the ground floor will be a large vestibule, board room, principal's rooms and offices, as well as a lecture hall for 300 students, and the various rooms belonging to the drawing school. The first floor will be assigned to the science department, and include a lecture hall for 200 students, with another suite of rooms, and the upper floor will be devoted to chemistry, physics and other subjects.

The Camphill Public School, situated on an eminence, is the largest elementary school in Scotland, and will hold 1,900 scholars.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Lim. the Clydesdale Bank Lim. the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is also a Savings Bank, which occupies premises in High street.

The Fountain Gardens, the gift of Thomas Coats esq. of Ferguslie House, extending between Love street and Caledonia street, comprise six acres of ground, tastefully laid out, with a large and ornamental fountain in the centre, and a smaller one at each of the four angles of the gardens.

Brodie Park was originally a farm of 26 acres, bequeathed to the town council of Paisley many years ago by the late Mr. Brodie.

Races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres, has, by Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park.

The weekly market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays in February and May, and the second Thursday in August and November respectively. February and August are the principal for cattle; August fair and races take place at the same date, and last for three days. Those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants.

Two newspapers are published in Paisley, viz.: the "Express," daily, and the "Paisley and Renfrewshire Gazette," weekly.

Alexander Wilson, the celebrated writer on American ornithology, was born here in 1766, and died 23 August, 1813; Robert Tannahill, a weaver and lyric poet, was also a native of Paisley, where he was born 3 June, 1774; he was the author of several still popular ballads, but died by his own act, 17 May, 1810. Here also, 19 May, 1785, was born the celebrated John Wilson, best known as Christopher North, and famous both as a critic, essayist and wit; he was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took his degree, and also carried off various University honours, including, in 1806, the Newdigate prize for English verse, besides highly distinguishing himself in athletic contests. In 1820 he became professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, but his chief reputation rests on the "Noctes Ambrosianæ," a series of papers contributed to Blackwood's Magazine (1822-35); he died at Edinburgh, 3 April, 1854. Dr. John Witherspoon, long the minister of one of the parishes here, wrote several of his best theological works in Paisley, prior to his emigration in 1768 to America, where he became president of the college at Princeton, where he died 15 November, 1794.

The mitred abbey of Paisley was founded in the year 1164, by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Alan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum. It was originally a Cluniac priory, colonised from the abbey of Much or Great Wenlock, in Shropshire, and dedicated to SS. James, Milburga and Mirinus, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey, and its lands erected into a regality by James II. the abbot being constituted lord thereof. Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, surrounded the abbey precincts with a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished, but a portion still remains, and a rhyming inscription, setting forth Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription, once on a tablet in the wall, is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. The monastic church is now that of the abbey; there were cloisters on the south side 60 feet square, but the domestic buildings have largely disappeared.

In 1560, after the Reformation, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claud Hamilton, third son of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, and Duke of Chatelherault, in France, on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley in 1652. The abbey lands were transferred from James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn and grandson of Claud, Baron Paisley, to the Earl of Angus, and from him passed in 1653 to Lord Dundonald, but the greater portion became the property, by purchase in 1764, of the Marquess of Abercorn, who eventually let it on building leases; so that the park, orchard, and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the materials of the monastery were used in the erection of the houses.

The rateable value of the burgh is £295,443; in 1891 the population was, in Abbey parish 25,312; High church, 20,342; Low church, 7,036 and Middle church, 13,704; total, 66,425, against 55,638 in 1881.

POLLOKSHAWS, see GLASGOW.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport, and parish, town, police and parliamentary burgh, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, 20 miles north-west from Glasgow and 3 east from Greenock, with a station on the Greenock section of the Caledonian railway. It formerly belonged to the parish of Kilmalcolm, but in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district. The town, which partly stands on the old barony of Newark, is neatly and regularly built; the streets run at right angles to each other and are lighted with gas. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and the lower grounds in the vicinity of the town have many good houses. The harbours are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress, and are accessible to vessels at all times of the tide. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, which has been extended and improved at a very considerable cost, and there is also a wet dock. During the year 1894, 40 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 21,457 were registered here, besides which, 25 steamers equal to 23,326 tons and 24 sailing ships equal to 41,611 tons were built at this port. Connected with the town are seven shipbuilding establishments, some of which are upon an extensive scale and employ many hands. There are also saw mills, roperies, sail cloth factories and engineering and sail making works. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors, with a town clerk and other officers. A burgh police court sits every Thursday and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Port Glasgow, together with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The Town House, erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000, is a structure in the Classic style, and has a tower with spire 150 feet in height, and containing a clock; the interior includes a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the town clerk and other public officers. The Town Hall, in Princes street, is a large stone building, used for public meetings &c. The Moffat Library is an elegant building at the north end of King street, erected in 1887 from part of a bequest left by the late James Moffat, merchant, Port Glasgow, and comprises, besides the library, reading, billiard and smoking rooms. The Carnegie Park Orphan Homes, at the east end of the town, and erected from the same bequest, were built at a cost of about £12,000.

Newark is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of Port Glasgow. The ancient castle of Newark, formerly occupied by the Maxwells of Pollok, is now the property of Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. as representative of the Maxwells of Pollok and Springkell; the ruins are well preserved, and from the site a fine view is obtained of the Clyde and its adjacent scenery, particularly the wild and singularly-formed rocky eminence on which stands the castle of Dumbarton. Port Glasgow parish church, erected upon the site of the old one, is a purely modern structure. There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Thursday in July, and continues for three days. Sir Michael Robert Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. of Ardgowan, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 944 acres; rateable value of the whole parish, £54,835; the population of the parish in 1891 was 11,973, of whom 11,950 were in the burgh, and in 1881 the total was 10,913 and burgh 10,872.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh and the capital of the county, and a parish in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is 50 miles west from Edinburgh, 13 east-by-south from Port Glasgow, 6 west from Glasgow, and 3 north from Paisley; a short distance from the Clyde, and 1 mile east from the White Cart; the parish lying on both banks of the Clyde. The town, which has a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway, consists of three good streets, from which several smaller ones issue, and it is well lighted with gas. There are two extensive shipbuilding yards, with a dock capable of accommodating vessels of large burthen, and also a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels frequenting the river may discharge and load with as great facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew railway is connected with this wharf, at which passengers to and from the steam boats navigating the Clyde arrive, and here goods are also shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish and other boats. Renfrew received its first charter from Robert III. in 1396, and in 1614 James VI. granted a charter for a school. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies and seven councillors. A magistrate's court sits every alternate Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Renfrew, together with Port Glasgow, Dumbarton, Kilmarnock and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The parish church, built in 1862, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, erected in the form of a Greek cross, and has a tower with a tall and graceful spire. Within the church lie two stone figures of Sir John Ross, of Hawkhead, and his wife, and on one of the walls is a marble tablet to the late Archibald Douglas Campbell esq. of Blythswood (d. 1868), father of the present Lord Blythswood. The church affords sittings for 1,050 persons. Walter Stewart built a castle here, on an eminence called Castle-hill, by the margin of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewart family, long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. Elderslie, the residence of Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. and Blythswood, the seat of Lord Blythswood D.L., J.P. are both situated on the banks of the Clyde in this parish. Lord Blythswood, Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. of Elderslie, and the Earl of Home are the chief landowners. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in May and the last Friday in June. The area of the parish comprises 4,311 acres; rateable value, £34,381; ; the population in 1891 was 9,338, including 6,777 in the burgh, 325 in Clydebank, and 31 in Paisley, and in 1881 was 7,439, including 5,553 in the burgh, and 303 in Clydebank; the population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 6,254.

THE COUNTY OF ROSS AND CROMARTY.

THIS is a large county in the north of Scotland, and includes the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmeanach or the Black Isle, and four-fifths of the Island of Lewis, and the former county of Cromarty: this last, being formed of scattered portions within and adjoining Ross, was, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, united for all purposes with the county of Ross. The present outline is irregular and the boundaries on the east and west sides touch the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean: the west coast of the Mainland is much indented with bays and lochs, and its actual water boundary is the North Minch, the strait which divides it from the Isle of Lewis. On the north and north-east the county of Sutherland forms the boundary as far as Dornoch Firth, from there southwards to the Beauly basin the North Sea and Moray Firth constitute the eastern boundary, and thence Inverness with the Isle of Skye extend around the south and south-west borders: the Ross portion of the Isle of Lewis being bounded by Harris, the portion of the island belonging to Inverness on the south, the North Minch on the east and the Atlantic on the north and west: the portion of the Isle of Lewis belonging to the county measures 40 miles from north to south by 25 in breadth, while the part belonging to the Mainland extends from east to west 67 miles and from north to south 58 miles. It comprises an area of 3,078 square miles, or 1,970,004 acres, and in point of size ranks as the third, and in population as the twelfth of the counties of Scotland. In 1891 the population was 36,862 males and 40,948 females; total, 77,810, against 78,547 in 1881; the inhabited houses being 15,848 in 1891 and 15,665 in 1881.

Of the early history of this county but little is known: it was at the time the Romans came to these parts inhabited by three tribes, the principal of which, the Caledonii, must have been a part of a larger Sept, as the name occurs in other districts in 1135. There was an Earl of Ross, but this title early became extinct.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western; a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is loamy clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation, where they appear in continuous chains from north-west to south-east, and the lochs necessarily follow the same direction. The most lofty mountains are Ben Dearg, 3,547 feet; More, 3,505; Teallach, 3,474; Wyviss, 3,429; Alton, 3,383; Slioch, 3,217; Eag, 3,160; Fin, 3,060 and Ben Alligin, 3,015, besides which, on the confines of Ross and Inverness, is Main Soul, 3,862. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long, dreary, cold winters and some very hot summer weather, and the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of firwood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted, and large additions have been in progress for many years. The deer forests of Ross extend over about 750,000 acres, and the shootings are a source of profit to the proprietors. Inverness-shire has rather less area for this purpose. The improvements effected in farming have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross. The chief crops are—Oats, 32,146 acres; hay, 17,506; turnips, 16,730; barley, 11,113; potatoes, 8,032; rye, 981; wheat, 914; the total corn crop being 45,180 acres and total green crops, 25,363; land under grass, 49,552; permanent pasture, 26,928; total area of land and water, 2,049,423 acres. The mountain and heath land was returned in 1894 as 1,007,822 acres; the live stock in 1894 comprised 8,001 horses, 43,315 cattle, 325,269 sheep and 5,293 pigs. The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little commercial value. Limestone occurs in several localities on the west coast, but very little coal. The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings has of late years become uncertain. At Ullapool in 1894 there were only 53 boats registered under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1863, employing 58 regular and 455 occasional hands. There are no manufactures of any importance, but in the neighbourhood of Dingwall, Invergordon and Tain several extensive distilleries are established.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, fed by the Orrin, Meig, Sheen, Farnich and Blackwater, which flows into the Cromarty Firth, and the Aultgraat and Alness, which have the same outlet, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Firth. The river Ewe, on the west coast, has a short course from Loch Maree, and the Broom river falls into Loch Broom. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Grienord, Loch Ewe, Gair Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keeshorn, Loch Carron and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Duich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them save Loch Maree, near the west coast, are of much magnitude or beauty. The Highland railway enters the county at Beauly in the south-east, runs north to Dingwall, whence a branch passes west-by-south round the north of Loch Luichart, up the Sheen water and along Glen Carron to the south part of Loch Carron, where Strome Ferry is the terminus, and from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis; the main line continues from Dingwall along the north side of the Cromarty Firth to Invergordon, whence it turns north to Tain and by the south of Dornock Firth to Culrain, where it leaves the county and proceeds to Golspie &c.; the scenery through which the line passes is very fine and varied; there is also a short branch from Dingwall to Strathpeffer Spa.

Lewis has some mountains, 1,200 to 1,700 feet, in the south and south-west portion of that section of the island, also an inland loch, Langabhat, about 8 miles long, and numerous inlets or "sen" lochs, the largest being Loch Boag on the west coast. There is a good harbour at Stornoway, sheltered from the north-east by the Eye peninsula. The population in 1891 was 27,045. The principal industry is sheep breeding.

Divisions, Representations &c.—The county contains 31 parishes and parts of two others; it has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain and Fortrose. The two former, with the town of Cromarty, join with Kirkwall, Wick and Dornoch in returning one member to Parliament, and the shire of Ross and Cromarty sends another. The parliamentary constituency numbered in 1894-5, 8,255. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation. The valuation of the county in 1894-5 (exclusive of railways) was £258,850, and of railways, £25,616.

ALNESS is a parish in the eastern half of the county, and a small village, partly in this parish and partly in that of Rosskeen, 3 miles south-west from Invergordon and about 10 from Dingwall, situated on both sides of the Averon (which river separates the two parishes), the part of the village lying in Rosskeen parish being known as Brig End of Alness. The parish is bounded on the east by Cromarty Firth and Rosskeen, on the south and west by Kiltearn and Fodderty and on the north by Kincardine and Rosskeen, extending in length some 20 miles, and having a mean breadth of about 5. Alness has a station on the Inverness and Wick section of the Highland railway. Alness is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and Alness Brig End in that of Invergordon or Tain. The production of whisky is carried on extensively in two distilleries. Iron and silver ores have been found in this neighbourhood. The Established and Free Churches are about half a mile west of the village, and the latter church has lately been rebuilt at a cost of £1,100. Teaninich House, the seat of Stuart Caradoc Munro esq. is situated about a mile west of the village. Formerly fairs were held here, but they are now discontinued. Ronald Craufurd Munro Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Raith and Novar; Stuart Caradoc Munro esq. and Walter Shoolbred esq. of Wyvis, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 44,041 acres; rateable value, £7,003 7s. 11d.; the population of the parish in 1881 was 1,033, and in 1891, 1,039; the population of the village in 1891 was 1,014, which includes Brig End.

APPLECROSS is a parish and small village about 15 miles north-west from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Strome Ferry section of the Highland railway, and about the same distance from Lochcarron. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, and measures 17 miles by 15, lies between Loch Torridon on the north, and Lochcarron on the south, and is bounded on the west by the Inner Sound, dividing it from Raasay Island, and on the east by the parishes of Gairloch and Lochgarron; its largest loch is Loch Damph, 4 miles in length; there are several detached hills varying from 2,000 to 2,900 feet above sea level, and it is well watered by some small streams. The climate is very moist, torrents of rain being frequent all the year round. There is a good limestone quarry on Applecross Bay, but the population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton, Lord Lovelace, Captain the Hon. Lionel F. King-Noel, Duncan Darroch esq. and Charles James Murray esq. Milntown, Shieldaig and Torridon are villages in this parish, and Croulin Island is also included in it, but part of the original parish has been transferred under boundary order 129 to Lochcarron parish, and part of Lochcarron to Applecross. Capt. Charles James Murray D.L., J.P. of Courthill, Lochcarron; Lord Middleton, of Applecross House; Duncan Darroch esq. B.A., D.L., J.P. of Gourock and Torridon, and Captain the Hon. Lionel Fortescue King-Noel, of Ben Damph, Shieldaig, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 112,895 acres; rateable value, £4,442 1s. 3d.; the population in 1881 was 2,239, and in 1891, 1,786.

Post & Money Order Office, Applecross (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should be addressed R.S.O. Ross-shire); Alexander Macrae, postmaster. Delivery, 7 p.m. mondays, wednesdays & fridays; dispatch, 6.30 a.m. tuesdays, thursdays & saturdays. The nearest telegraph office is Kishorn, 15 miles distant CONTIN is a parish and village, 7 miles south-west from Dingwall and 3 miles west from Strathpeffer station on the Dingwall and Strathpeffer section of the Highland railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, extends 20 miles from north-west to south-east, by the same in breadth at its widest part, diminishing to 5 in the north, and is bounded on the north by Lochcarron, on the south by Urray, on the east by Fodderty and on the west by Lochbroom and Gairloch. Sir Arthur George Ramsay Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. of Coul; Richard A. Combe, of Strathconon, and Lady Ashburton, of Kinlochluichart, are the principal landowners. The area previous to the alteration of the boundary was 179,276 acres; rateable value of present area £18,096; the population in 1881 was 1,422, and in 1891, 1,436.

Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, parts of Fodderty and Urray parishes have been transferred to Contin.

CROMARTY.

CROMARTY is a parliamentary burgh and seaport, and a small parish at the entrance to the Cromarty Firth, an inlet of Moray Firth, and is in the poor combination of Black Isle. The town, which stands on a promontory on the south side of the strait leading into the fine harbour formed by Cromarty Firth, is situated 19½ miles north-east from Inverness, 17 north-west from Nairn, 11 south from Tain, 9 north-by-east from Fortrose, 7 east, by water, from Invergordon, a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway, and 10 from the terminus of the Inverness, Muir of Ord and Fortrose railway. The harbour, formed by the Cromarty Firth, is one of the safest on the East Coast, the entrance being well protected by two headlands, known as the North and South Soutors; it was known to the Romans as the "Portis Salutis," and is capable of holding a large fleet, and the bay presents good facilities for bathing. The herring and white fishery is carried on to some extent in this quarter. The Town Hall, an ancient building, in Church street, contains an old bell with the inscription "S Dimas Carracs Ano Dizzi": this bell, it is thought, is one of the many captured by Sir Charles L. Ross, of Balnagown, during the French war, and presented to several northern towns. The parish church, built in pre-Reformation days, stands at the east of the town: the records of the Kirk session date from 1671. A chapel for the Gaelic portion of the community is situated on the hill south of the town, and a Free church is the only other place of worship. In the burgh is a good public hall, erected by the artillery volunteers as a drill hall and place for entertainments. There are branches of the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Beneath the South Soutor is a chasm, called "Charlie's Seat," and a petrifying stream called the "Dropping Cave." Near the North Soutor are seven sunken rocks termed the "Kings' Sons," so named from the tradition of three kings' sons having been drowned near these rocks when on their way from Denmark, and to their memory were erected three obelisks, one in the parish of Nigg, and two in the parish of Fearn. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a column 40 feet high, surmounted by a full-sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller (d. 1856), the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," who was a native of Cromarty. Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh, was the sculptor, and the monument was erected by public subscription in 1860, at a cost of £1,500. In the house in which Hugh Miller was born, 1802, is a small museum of fossils &c. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitation of Sir John Urquhart, a former proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornoch, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to Parliament. The present proprietor is Capt. Walter Charteris Ross, of Cromarty House. The area of the parish comprises 8,017 acres; rateable value, £4,594; the population in 1881 was 2,009, with 1,360 in the burgh, and in 1891 was 2,007, including 1,338 in the burgh.

DINGWALL.

DINGWALL is the county town of Ross and Cromarty, and a parish, royal burgh and market town, 178 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh, 21 north-west from Inverness, 20 south-west from Cromarty, 13 south-west from Invergordon and 9 north from Beauly, with a station at the junction of the Inverness and Thurso and Dingwall and Strome Ferry sections of the Highland railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street and several smaller ones, and is situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain near the western extremity of the Firth of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town, and about three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier or jetty, for vessels discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II. and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Cromarty, Tain, Dornoch, Wick and Kirkwall in returning one member to parliament. Water is supplied from springs above the town and gas from works in Tulloch street. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than at present, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. With the exception of a distillery, there are no manufactories or large works. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, is a curious old building with a spire and clock. In the High street are three hotels. In the same street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited and the Bank of Scotland. The Established church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. Near the church is an obelisk, 57 feet in height, erected to Sir George Mackenzie, first Earl of Cromartie, erected 1703, who in accordance with his last injunction, was buried here, 1714. In Castle street is the Episcopal church, rebuilt in 1872, after being destroyed by fire; the church contains several fine stained windows and a handsome organ. The Free church, in High street, is a modern edifice. The Ross Memorial Hospital, in Ferry road, is a small stone building, erected in 1873. A little to the east of the town stand the County Buildings, completed in 1845, at a cost of £5,000, and containing a county room, a sheriff court room and county clerk's and other offices, together with a prison; the County Council meets in these County buildings. In the same direction is an extensive distillery, known as the Ben Wyvis Distillery, owned by the Ferintosh Distillery Co. Limited. Near the town stands the mansion of the Ross family, the walls being complete and the building lately repaired. Tulloch Castle is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. The market is held every Wednesday, and the fairs on the third Wednesday in January, the third Wednesday in February, the first Wednesday in June, the first Tuesday in July, the first Wednesday in September and in November, and the Tuesday next before Christmas (new style). The trustees of the late D. H. C. Davidson D.L.,J.P. of Tulloch; Col. James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth and William Dalziel Mackenzie M.A.,D.L., J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 6,644 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £9,655 13s. 9d. and of the landward portion of the parish, £4,056 8s. 3d.; total, £13,712; the population of the parish in 1881 was 2,220, with 1,932 in the burgh, and in 1891, was 2,576, including 2,300 in the burgh. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty.

FODDERTY parish is a very long one, being 20 miles in length by a breadth varying from 1 to 5, bounded by Edderton on the north, Dingwall, Kiltearn and Alness on the east, Dingwall on the south, and Contin on the west, and is intersected by part of the river Blackwater; it is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and is 4 miles west from Dingwall, and about 1 west from Auchterneed station on the Strome branch, and 2 north-west from Strathpeffer terminal station, also on a branch of the Highland railway, both being in the parish. The Dingwall and Skye railway traverses part of the parish, having the terminus at Strome Ferry, from which point steamers in connection with the railway convey passengers to the Isle of Skye and Lewis at regularly stated times. Loch Ussie, about 1½ miles square, and Ben Wyvis Mountain, 3,429 feet in height, are in the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty. Coul, situated in this parish, is the property of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. Near Strathpeffer Mineral Spa is Brahan Castle, the ancient and princely residence of the Seaforth family, and now the property of Colonel James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth. This beautiful seat is situated below the southern slope of Knock-Farrel, and commands an extensive and varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the river Conon and Orrin. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Earl of Cromartie; Colonel James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth, and William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 64,230 acres; rateable value of present area, £13,702; population in 1881, 2,047, and in 1891, 1,897.

Strathpeffer (which see) and Maryburgh are villages, and Auchterneed is a hamlet in this parish. The population of Maryburgh in 1891 was 390.

Post & Telegraph Office, Auchterneed; Donald Fraser, postmaster. Letters through Dingwall. Delivery, 2.30 p.m.; dispatch, 6.40 a.m. & 12.30 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Strathpeffer

FORTROSE is a small town and royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and quoad sacra parish out of the civil parish of Rosemarkie; it is 10 miles north from Inverness, 21 south from Tain and 18 north-north-east from Beauly, situated on the southern slopes of the Black Isle, on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Firth, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant 2½ miles. In November, 1893, was opened a branch line of the Highland railway, commencing at Muir of Ord, and having its terminus at Fortrose; it is 13½ miles in length, and has stations at Redcastle, Allangrange, Munlochy, Avoch and Fortrose. Fortrose has advantages for seabathing; and there is an excellent hotel (the Royal), which is also a posting establishment. James II. in 1445 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighbouring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. It reverted to the crown at the Reformation, and was in consequence enfranchised and erected into an independent royal burgh in 1590, and again annexed to Rosemarkie in 1592 under the name of the Royal Burgh of Fortrose. The burgh is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and nine councillors; and it joins with Inverness, Forres and Nairn in sending one member to Parliament. The Bishopric of Ross was formed by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, but in 1762 was united to Caithness, and in 1769 to Moray, and is now part of the consolidated diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, formed in 1864. The cathedral here, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Boniface, is an edifice of red sandstone, in the purest form of the Decorated style, and consisted, when entire, of choir with aisles, nave of four bays with aisles, western tower, quasi-transepts, lady chapel, crypt and chapter house, but the only portions now standing are the south aisle of the chancel and nave and the detached chapter house: in the aisle are several ancient tombs of the 14th century, and a piscina. The town has an excellent harbour, built by the parliamentary commissioners, and a jetty about 250 yards in length, erected at a cost of £3,000. There is a branch of the Caledonian Bank in the town, which depends for its prosperity on agriculture and fishing, and its advantages as a summer and seaside resort. Rateable value of the burgh, £3,881; the population of the royal burgh in 1891 was 988; police burgh, 871, and ecclesiastical parish, 840.

GAIRLOCH is a large parish, in the small debt court district of Dingwall, 28 miles north-west from Achnasheen station on the Strome branch of the Highland railway, 52 north-west from Dingwall, 30 north-east from Portree and 45 south-east from Stornoway. It is about 40 miles in length by from 15 to 20 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire, having about 20 miles of coast line on the east of the Minch, between the hills of Dundonnell and Torridon; bounded on the north-east by Lochbroom, on the east by Contin and on the south by Applecross and Lochcarron, and is intersected for 12½ miles by Loch Maree (a description of which is given under "Poolewe") and by some smaller lochs, also by the rivers Grudie, Belugan, Kerry and Lungard and some rivulets. The soil is fertile and mostly in cultivation, with some good plantations and deer forests. The parish abounds in mountains, lochs and heaths, and has some beautiful scenery, and an abundance of game of all description. The three highest mountains are Ben Sclioch, 3,217 feet, Ben Eay, 3,160 feet, and Ben Alligin, 3,105 feet high. There is a branch of the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited in the village. The principal landowners are Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. of Gairloch; Mrs. Maria Ann Liot Bankes, of Ardlair; Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. of Inverewe and Joseph Frederick Laycock, of Wiseton Hall, Bawtry, Notts and Letterewe. Acreage, 200,646; rateable value, £11,269; population of the civil parish in 1881 was 4,594, and in 1891, 4,181, and in the ecclesiastical 2,071.

Aultbea, Strath, Badachro and Kinlochewe are small villages in this parish.

INVERGORDON.

INVERGORDON is a police burgh and seaport town in the parish of Rosskeen and Easter Ross poor combination, 12 miles south-south-west from Tain, 13 north-north-east from Dingwall and 8 west from Cromarty, with a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway; it lies on the northern point of the entrance to the inner or narrower portion of Cromarty Firth. There is a ferry from the town to Cromarty and a small pier was erected in 1821 at the expense of the county and the Government, so that boats could land their passengers at any time of the tide. The late proprietor, R. B. Æ. M'Leod esq. of Cadboll, at his own expense constructed an excellent harbour in 1828; this for many years served for the landing of the seaborne goods for the eastern and western parts of Ross-shire, as well as for most parts of Sutherlandshire. In 1857, large wooden piers were built extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London &c. coming alongside; the extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863 has diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is very commodious and safe, and has good anchorage. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Invergordon has undergone considerable improvement of late years, and the Free church is a handsome edifice, cruciform in shape, with a spire some 140 feet high. In High street there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The Town Hall, also in the High street, opened in April, 1871, is a building in the Italian style with a pediment containing a beautifully sculptured group representing the god Neptune, with the "horn of plenty" on one side and aquatic plants on the other. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town, but the principal industry at present is a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, carried on in buildings covering over an acre of ground, which together with the timber yards give employment to a number of workpeople. The principal inn is the "Commercial," in High street. A justice of peace court is held when necessary, and a sheriff court quarterly. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of Provost Lindsay's Police Act. The population of the burgh in 1881 was 1,119, and in 1891, 1,117.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, High street (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ross-shire added); Donald Ross, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.35 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.50 a.m. & 12.15, 12.40, 3.50 & 7.40 p.m. No delivery on sundays

KILTEARN is a large parish, in Dingwall small debt court district, about 18 miles long by 5 wide, and has for the whole of its northern boundary the Ault Graat water, extending on the south to Cromarty Firth. The church stands on the road from Dingwall to Tain, about 2 miles north from Fowlis station and 1 south from Nova station, both in the parish, on the Tain and Dingwall section of the Highland railway, 6 north from Dingwall and 7 south-west from Invergordon. Loch Glass, about 4½ miles long and 1 broad, is in the parish, through the southern part of which runs the Skiach water, which flows into Cromarty Firth near the village. Amongst the objects of interest in the neighbourhood are the Falls of Coneas, and the grave of the Rev. Thomas Hogg, of Kiltearn, a distinguished northern Covenanter. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. Sir Hector Munro bart. D.L., J.P. of Foulis Castle; Ronald Craufurd Munro-Ferguson esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Novar House, Evanton; Walter Shoolbred esq. of Wyvis, and Major Randle Jackson D.L., J.P. of Swordale. The area of the parish is 27,792 acres; rateable value, £9,214; in 1881 it contained a population of 1,182, and in 1891, 1,301, of which number 493 were returned as belonging to the village of Evanton.

Evanton is a rural village in this parish, about a mile from the parish church, on the north side of Cromarty Bay, and sheltered by a row of trees from the sea breeze. A Mission Hall in connection with the parish church was erected here in 1894. About 2 miles to the westward is Foulis-Ferry, used for loading grain, timber and cattle, and a mile north-east of the village is a deep ravine called "The Black Rock of Kiltearn," supposed to have been formed at some very early period by a mighty convulsion of nature.

Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office & Savings Bank, Evanton (Railway Sub-Office. Letters should have R.S.O. Ross-shire added); Thomas Urquhart, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.40 a.m. & 12.40 p.m.; dispatches, 7.30 a.m. & 12 noon & 7.45 p.m

KINCARDINE is a large parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and Tain small debt court district, about 13 miles north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch. There are stations on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway at Bonar Bridge, 1 mile west, and Culrain, 4 miles north-west from the church, both within the parish, which is about 25 miles in length; the breadth varies from 6 miles in the east to 15 in the west; it is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth and rivers Oykel and Kyle, on the south by Contin, Alness, Fodderty and Rosskeen, on the east by Edderton and Rosskeen, and on the west by Lochbroom and Assynt. It contains several small lochs, and the Carron water runs through the centre of the parish, flowing into the Kyle near Bonar Bridge. There are also several small rivers in the parish. The principal landowners are Sir Charles Henry Augustus Frederick Lockhart-Ross bart. D.L. of Balnagown; Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh, and Alexander Littlejohn esq. D.L., J.P. of Invercharron. The area is 153,054 acres; rateable value, £12,156; and in 1881 the population of the civil parish was 1,472, and in 1891, 1,417, and of the ecclesiastical, 1,225.

Ardgay is a village in the parish of Kincardine, and half a mile from Bonar Bridge station on the Highland line, situated on the north border of Ross-shire. It has a commodious inn. A deed was granted in the year 1686 to erect the village into a burgh of barony, but this was never carried into effect.

Culrain, Gledfield, Oykell, Doune and Brae are small hamlets in this parish.

Croick is a quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Kincardine. The population in 1891 was 192.

KINTAIL is a parish and small village, in the southern portion of the county, about 16 miles south-east from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Strome Ferry section of the Highland railway, and Strathcarron station, on the same line, lies 7 miles east from the northern border of the parish. The boundaries of the parish are Lochalsh parish on the west and north-west, Urray on the north-east, Inverness-shire on the east and south-east, and Glenshiel on the south, and its extent is 20 miles from north-east to south-west by 15 in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall. Loch Duich, on the south-western border of the parish, and opening into Loch Alsh, has some very picturesque surroundings, and on an island at the entrance to the loch are the ruins of Eilean Donan Castle, a former seat of the Mackenzies of Kintail. In the village of Dornie, in this parish, the late Duchess of Leeds erected a Roman Catholic chapel, with schools attached. Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh, and Mrs. Annie C. Chisholm, of Erchless Castle, near Beauly, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 77,441 acres; rateable value, £5,459; the population in 1881 was 688, and in 1891, 588.

KISHORN, see LOCHCARRON.

KNOCKBAIN (or Kilmuir-Wester) is a parish in Black Isle poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dingwall. Munlochy is the principal village in the parish, which also contains the smaller villages and hamlets of Charleston, Craigton, Kilmuir, North Kessock and Artafallie. There is now a station on the Fortrose branch of the Highland railway at Munlochy, 8 miles south from Dingwall. The parish, which is 6½ miles broad by 5 in length, is on the south and south-east shores of the Beauly and Inverness Firths, opposite the town of Inverness, with which there is communication by ferry to and from North and South Kessock. The principal landowners are James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.P., J.P. of Dochfour; James Fowler Mackenzie esq. J.P. of Allangrange; Lieut.-Col. John Edward Burton-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Kilcoy, and the trustees of the late George Maclean esq. of Drynie. The area is 12,035 acres; rateable value, £8,313; the population in 1881 was 1,866, and in 1891, 1,698.

LEWIS—ISLAND OF, see OUTER HEBRIDES or WESTERN ISLANDS, p. 746.

LOCHALSH is a parish, in the Dingwall small debt court district, 6 miles south-west from Strome Ferry station on the Highland line, 53 south-west from Dingwall and 30 south-east from Portree. It is a large parish, being 28 miles in length and 8 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire and on the shores of Loch Carron, Loch Alsh and Loch Long, intersected by the river Aven Liunge for about 12 miles and by the river Attadale for 6 miles, and contains numerous small streams and trout lochs, the two principal being Scavan and Doule, both being about 1½ miles long. It is bounded on the north by Contin, on the south by Loch Alsh and east by Urray and Kintail. A branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited is established in the village, and there are two good hotels, one at Strome Ferry station and one at Balmacarra. The occupation of the inhabitants is chiefly fishing. The soil in the east end of the parish is fertile, whilst the west end is mountainous, but covered in some parts by deer forests and plantations, the former abounding in red deer, game &c. Near Plockton, which is about 4 miles from Strome, is Duncraig Castle, one of the seats of Sir Kenneth J. Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh. Acreage, 49,532; rateable value, £5,146; this parish in 1881 possessed a population of 2,050, and in 1891, 1,868.

Strome Ferry, in this parish, has recently sprung into prominence through being the present terminus of the Dingwall and Skye railway, and the most direct route to Portree, to which place steamers ply regularly, and from thence there is communication by MacBrayne's steamers with Stornoway, Glasgow &c. The above mentioned line of railway is at present (1896) being extended to Kyle, a distance of 10 miles from Stromeferry. There is a first-class hotel here. The Established church is a stone building, erected in 1890, at a cost of £650, raised by public subscription.

Balmacarra and Plockton are villages, and Kyle, Ardelve, Reraig and Auchtertyre hamlets in this parish. The population of Plockton village in 1891 was 422.

LOCHBROOM is a large parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and small debt court district of Dingwall, 25 miles north-west from Garve station on the Highland line, and 38 north-west from Dingwall; it is about 30 miles in length and 8 to 22 in breadth, is on the shores of Loch Broom, an inlet of the sea from which it takes its name, and in a picturesque and mountainous district. It is bounded by Assynt in Sutherlandshire on the north, Kincardine and Contin on the east, Gairloch on the south, and the Minch on the west, and is intersected by the rivers Achall and Ullapool and some smaller streams; Loch Broom extends inland for about 8 miles, and Little Loch Broom about the same distance, and several smaller lochs, including Loch Lurgan, Loch Anchall, 2 miles long and 1 broad, and Loch Skinaskink are in the parish, as are An Teallach, 3,474 feet high, Ben Deargmor, 2,974 feet, the Dundonnell Hills and other ranges. The Summer Isles, Isle Tanera, Isle Martin, Priest Isle and numerous islets form part of this parish. The parish church stands at the head of Loch Broom, and was built in 1844. Four miles north-west of the parish church is Leckmelm, the pleasantly situated estate of Alexander G. Pirie esq. and to the south-east is Braemore Castle, the residence of Sir John Fowler bart. K.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. overlooking Loch Broom, and situated on the spur of a hill, 600 feet above sea level. Deer forests cover a considerable portion of the parish. The principal landowners are Sibell, Countess of Cromartie; Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Dundonnell; Sir John Fowler bart. K.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. of Braemore, Garve; Mrs. Maria Ann Liot Bankes, of Ardlair; Sir Arthur George Ramsay Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. of Coul; Alfred Hugh M. Calton esq. of Gruinards; Alexander George Pirie esq. and the trustees of the late Lady Matheson, of Lews. The area of the civil parish is 261,021 acres; rateable value, £14,211; the population in 1881 was 4,191, and in 1891, 3,910, and 1,487 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LOCHCARRON is a parish, in the Dingwall small debt court district, 2 miles west from Strathcarron station on the Dingwall and Strome line of the Highland railway; 48 west-by-south from Dingwall and 4 north-east from Strome Ferry, and is about 18 miles in length and from 5 to 6 in breadth and is on Loch Carron, a sea loch extending inland about 8 miles, and on Loch Kishorn, and between the hills of Torridon and Scour Na Vertach. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 129, a part of Killearnan parish has been transferred to Lochcarron. The parish is bounded on the north by Applecross, on the west by Applecross and Gairloch, east by the river and Loch Carron, which separates it from Lochalsh, and south by Loch Carron. The lochs in the parish are Lary, Nan Con, Coulin and Corrylair. The plantations are numerous, and deer forests cover a considerable extent. In the village is a good hotel and a branch of the Caledonian Banking Co. Limited. The principal landowners are Lord Wimborne D.L., J.P. of Glencarron Lodge; Capt. Charles James Murray D.L., J.P. of Courthill, Lochcarron; Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh; Sir William Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. of Coulin Lodge, and Errol Park, Perthshire; John Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. of Ardoch, Kishorn; Capt. The Hon. Lionel Fortescue King-Noel, of Bendamph, Shieldaig, and Emerson Muschamp Bainbridge esq. J.P. of Auchnashellach Lodge. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 81,488 acres; rateable value of present area, £6,295; in 1881 the population was 1,456, and in 1891, 1,642.

The principal village is Lochcarron, formerly called Jeantown, near the head of the loch.

NIGG is a parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and small debt court district of Tain, about 9 miles south from Tain and 4 south from Nigg station on the Highland railway. It is bounded on the north by Fearn, south by Cromarty Firth, east by Moray Firth, and on the west by Nigg Bay and Logie Easter, measuring in length 5 miles, with a breadth of 3½. A third of the parish consists of its most interesting physical feature, the Hill of Nigg, rising to a height of 500 feet; from the highest point nine counties may be seen by the naked eye. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Ross Duncan, of Shandwick; trustees of the late Captain Andrew G. Reid; Sir Charles Hy. Aug. Frederick Lockhart-Ross bart. D.L. of Balnagown Castle and Capt. Wm. Hugh Eric Murray, of Geanies. The area is 7,818 acres; rateable value, £5,687; and in 1881 had a population of 1,000, and in 1891, 930.

POOLEWE is a small fishing village and quoad sacra parish, the latter formed from that of Gairloch, 64 miles west from Dingwall, and about the same distance south-east from Stornoway and 30 north-west from Achnasheen on the Highland railway, its nearest railway station; at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. In 1619, a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great seal, erecting Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a burgh of barony, and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies &c.; and not only of keeping burgh courts for the good government of the burgh and the administration of justice, but of creating burgesses, levying the burgh duties, buying and selling merchandise as practised in other burghs in the kingdom, and planting artisans, keeping weights and measures, and levying customs, anchorage &c. after the manner of other royalties; of having a market cross, a Saturday market each week, and a public market once a year under the name of Michaelmas market, beginning September 29th and continuing four days, but it does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Skye railway, there is regular communication by coach from the hotel at Auchnasheen station to Kinlochewe, Gairloch, Poolewe and Aultbae. Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, the present proprietor being Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. lord lieutenant of the county. A Public Hall has been recently (1896) erected, and is used for meetings, assemblies &c. At Bualnaluip is a school, erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie esq. and is now a board school. A justice of peace court is held here at times fixed by the resident magistrates. At Poolewe, the curing of salmon, grilse and trout is carried on to a great extent. It is about 2 miles from Loch Maree, which is about 18 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and abounds with fish: this lake contains about thirty islands, one of which is called Maree, from which the water takes its name; some of these are but little raised above water level and are covered with scattered firs and with thickets of birch, alder and holly, while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels: the northern margin of the loch presents a variety of scenery, consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by overhanging cliffs and mountains: in one place are the remains of a fir forest. A fine view of the loch, embracing nearly its whole length, is obtained at Tollie, about a mile from Poolewe. Loch Maree is the property of Sir Kenneth S. Mackenzie bart. of Gairloch. Into the inner part of Loch Ewe (or Ew, or Eu) pours the river Ewe, which is scarcely 2 miles in length and is the natural outlet from Loch Maree; the river has a rapid turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. On the west shore of the lake are the ruins of a chapel, which is believed to have given name to the isle and loch, and said to date from the 8th century: there are also some old tombstones on which are crosses and other carvings. Inverewe is the residence of Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. Two large hotels are on this route, one at Loch Maree and another at Gairloch, for the accommodation of tourists. Area, 200,646 acres; the population of the quoad sacra parish in 1891 was 2,110.

ROSEMARKIE, in Black Isle poor combination and small debt court of Dingwall, is one mile from Fortrose terminal station on a branch from Muir of Ord on the Highland railway and about 18 east from Dingwall. Rosemarkie and Fort George in Inverness-shire are connected by a ferry. The parish extends 9 miles in length along the coast of Moray Firth, and is 3 in breadth. The hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure, and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is romantic, being bold and rocky, and as the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. The parish church was completed in 1821, and is in the Late Gothic style. Fairs are held on the Monday before Beauly fair. James Douglas Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. of Rosehaugh, Avoch; James Evan Fowler esq. D.L., J.P. of Raddery House, and Mrs. Mackenzie, of Flowerburn, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,675 acres; rateable value, £4,020; the population in 1881 was 1,357, and in 1891, 1,343; of this number, 363 were returned as belonging to the village of Rosemarkie, the remainder being in the Fortrose burgh; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 840.

Sub-Post Office; Kenneth Mackenzie, sub-postmaster. Letters through Fortrose R.S.O. Deliveries, 10.50 a.m. & 1.50 p.m.; dispatches, 7.15 & 11 a.m. & on saturday only, 8 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Fortrose

ROSSKEEN is a parish in Easter Ross poor combination, and is in the eastern part of the county, bounded on the north by Kincardine and Edderton, on the east by Kilmuir Easter, on the south by the Firth of Cromarty, and on the west by Alness; estimated length of entire parish about 20 miles with a breadth varying from 3 to 5. The lower part of the parish, which runs along the Firth, and for about 2 miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. A hill called Knock-Navie, or Coldhill, divides the lower from the higher part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing black cattle or sheep. The parish possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these belonging to Invergordon Castle. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. The parish church is one mile west of the town of Invergordon, and is a substantial building, erected in 1827, with 1,200 sittings. Fairs are held the third Tuesday in April, the first Tuesday in August, the second Tuesday in October and the third Tuesday in December. About one mile from the town of Invergordon is Invergordon Castle, the seat of Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll. In November, 1801, the centre of the edifice was accidentally destroyed by fire, but in 1873-4 a very elegant structure was erected on the old site in the Elizabethan style; in the park are some fine plantations. Ardross Castle, the property of Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh, and at present occupied by Sir John Henry Greville Smyth bart. is also situated in the parish of Rosskeen. Sir K. J. Matheson bart. of Lochalsh; Capt. R. W. Macleod D.L., J.P.; George Inglis esq. J.P. of Newmore; trustees of the late Roderick Mackenzie, of Kincraig, and Andrew Mackenzie esq. of Dalmore, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 33,725; rateable value, £14,589; population in 1881, 3,773, and in 1891, 3,480; of this number 1,122 were returned for Invergordon; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 840.

Saltburn, one mile east from Invergordon, is a hamlet in this parish.

STRATHPEFFER is a modern village, 4½ miles west from Dingwall, in the parish of Fodderty, and is the terminus of the Strathpeffer branch of the Highland railway. There is also a station at Auchterneed, 2 miles north, on the Strome branch of the same line. The village has a branch of the Caledonian Bank. Strathpeffer Mineral Wells are at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about three miles due west from Dingwall; several villas for invalid visitors have been erected near them, and there are three good hotels and three temperance hotels, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings during the season from May to September. The springs rise through the shaly sandstone which is prevalent in the district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the North of Scotland, having an altitude of 3,429 feet. From the summit views may be obtained of the counties of Ross, Sutherland, Caithness and Inverness. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, of Aberdeenshire, who affirmed that they were the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by Dr. T. Thompson, in May, 1828, who analysed the water, which is strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Large additions have been made to the spa establishment, which consists of a pump room, hot and cold baths, a pavilion and reading room. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and best preserved vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road bounds the grounds of the ancient seat of the Cromartie family, Castle Leod, a castellated mansion. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the wooded knolls of Coul, the property of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. and the manse, village and island plain of Contin, beyond which are the shores of Loch Achilty and the sheepwalks of Comrie to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathgarve. Nearer to the mineral spa is a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Braham Castle. The population of the village in 1891 was 350.

STROME FERRY, see LOCHALSH.

TAIN, a royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and a market town, is a parish in Easter Ross poor combination, with a station on the Highland railway, and is 46 miles north from Inverness and 26 north-by-east from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Firth of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea several ferries are established. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Bailie Dhuthaich boed heach, signifying "the town of St. Duthac" (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but of late years has received improvements and additions. The parish extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 4 miles inland, and is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth, on the south by Logie Easter, on the east by Fearn and on the west by Edderton and Kilmuir Easter. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west is rather hilly: the district is tolerably well wooded and much improved by agricultural operations. The sea shore is flat and sandy. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors, and unites with the northern district of burghs in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held every Wednesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The church of the Establishment is an edifice of considerable dimensions, in form quadrangular, with a castellated tower at each corner, which, not rising above the main body of the building, renders the general appearance of the whole more massive than elegant: a sum of £700 has recently (1896) been expended for internal renovation, the old seats having been removed and replaced by more modern ones. The Free church is a handsome building erected in 1892, at a cost of £6,000, and superseding an earlier one. The old chapel of St. Duthus, standing below the town near the railway station, was built about 1200; to it Robert the Bruce's queen and her retinue fled for refuge, but were taken captive by the Earl of Ross and delivered up to the English. The church, founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1428, is an elegant structure, and was used as a parish church until 1815, but was afterwards left unprotected and ruinous for upwards of 40 years, when its restoration by public subscription was undertaken and conducted until 1877 by Mr. John M'Leod, then provost of Tain, and thereafter by his son, George M'Leod, until 1882: it contains some stained windows in memory of families in the district, and monuments to Thomas Hogg and Patrick Hamilton, the Scottish martyrs, and likewise a replica of a finely carved oaken pulpit, which was presented to the people of Tain by the "good regent" Murray. St. Duthac seems to have been a saint who enjoyed a considerable reputation in Scotland in the 15th century, as records state that James IV. once made a pilgrimage on foot from Falkland, in Fife, to his shrine at the church of Tain, for the expiation of some offence: he travelled with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land with other immunities: the inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." The Royal Academy, in an open park at the west end of the town, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1812, the cost of its erection having been raised by subscription: the course of education is conducted by a rector, with a classical master and assistants. The Court House, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors; in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames: the present Court House is erected on its site, and is a building surmounted by pinnacles; the old tower and bartizan are of rare construction, and a beautiful specimen of architecture; the tower closely resembles the Eschenhein Tower at Frankfurt, in Germany. In the town is a large hall for assemblies and public meetings and an hotel (the Royal). A Masonic Hall is now (1896) in course of erection in Manse street, to cost about £600. The trade here consists principally of distilling, which is carried on extensively by the Glenmorangie Distillery Co. Limited and woollen manufacturing. There are branches respectively of the British Linen Company Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and North of Scotland Bank Limited and a savings bank. The principal markets are held on the Wednesday after the second Tuesday in July, on the Wednesday after the third Tuesday in August and on the third Tuesday in October and corn markets are held every other Friday. In the year 1895, the ancient "Mercat cross" was restored by ex-provost James Vass M.D. now of Edinburgh. Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll and Invergordon, and James Neill esq. of Gourdie, Lochee, Dundee, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 16,668 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £6,796, and of the burgh, £6,256; in 1881 the population was 3,009, and in 1891, 2,818; of this number the town possessed 2,080; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 1,632.

Inver and Inver-Skinnerton form a village principally in Tain parish but partly in that of Tarbat; the population in 1891 was 352.

TARBAT is a small parish and village, in the extreme north-easterly part of the county, forming a peninsula 7 miles by 3 between the Moray and Dornoch Firths, and contains, besides its own kirktown, the village of Portmahomack and part of that of Inver; it is in the poor combination of Easter Ross and the small debt court district of Tain. The extreme northerly point of the peninsula is Tarbat Ness, on which there is a lighthouse. Fearn station on the Dingwall and Thurso section of the Highland railway is 8 miles south-west of the kirktown. The trustees of the late R. B. Æ. Macleod, of Cadboll, and Capt. Hugh Eric Murray, of Geanies, are the principal landowners. The area is 6,787 acres; rateable value, £6,624 19s. 4d.; the population in 1881 was 1,878, and in 1891, 1,703.

ULLAPOOL, a seaport and fishing village on the west of the county, is also a quoad sacra and parliamentary parish, erected from the civil parish of Lochbroom; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, but justice of peace courts are held in the village, which is 61 miles west-by-north from Inverness, 45 north-west from Dingwall and 30 north-east from Poolewe; it is situated on the north shore of Loch Broom, about 5 miles from the mouth, and is 32 miles north-west from Garve station on the Strome Ferry section of the Highland railway. It was begun under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1788, and has gradually increased since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. There is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited in the village. The herring fishery is the main dependence of its inhabitants: shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they do not enter the lochs and arms of the sea as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for and great preparations made to profit by them: when the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The number of fishing boats registered in 1894 as belonging to this port was 53, aggregating 194 tons, and employing 513 hands. The late Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of the heirs of the late Sir James Matheson bart. and is visited in summer by sportsmen from all parts to enjoy the fishing and shooting. There are two hotels, and they have a small grouse shooting box attached to them, and visitors have the privilege of free trout fishing on the river Ullapool. The Drill Hall is also used for meetings. The population of the village was 868 in 1891, and 897 in 1881, and that of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,423.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER form a large parish, in Black Isle poor combination and small debt court district of Dingwall, 2 miles east from Dingwall; there is a station at Conon in the parish, about 5 miles south from the church, on the Highland line. The parish, which is 10 miles long by 3 broad, is on the south-east shore of the Cromarty Firth, and is bounded on the east by Knockbain and Resolis, on the north-east by Fodderty and the Cromarty Firth, and on the south by Killearnan. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 28, that part of Urquhart formerly in Nairnshire has been transferred to this county. Sir Kenneth Smith Mackenzie bart. J.P. of Gairloch; Duncan Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. of Culloden; James A. Jamieson esq. and George Dalziel esq. of Edinburgh, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 13,581 acres; rateable value, £9,532; the population in 1881 was 2,525, and in 1891 was 2,328.

Conon Bridge, Alcaig, Culbokie, Duncanstown and Newton-of-Ferintosh are small villages in this parish. The population of Conon Bridge in 1891 was 358.

URRAY is an extensive parish, in the small debt court district of Dingwall; it is 15 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Inverness-shire, on the west by Kintail and Lochalsh, north by Contin and Fodderty, and east by Urquhart and Killearnan. The church stands on the road from Inverness and Beauly to Dingwall, and is about 3 miles west from Muir-of-Ord station on the Highland railway, about 5 south from Dingwall and 3½ north from Beauly. The rivers Orain and Meig both have their source in the western part of the parish, having their confluence with the Strath Garve at its eastern extremity. Scour Ruddh Mountain, 3,254 feet high, is on the Inverness-shire border, and Scour Vuillin in the northern part of the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, parts of Contin and Fodderty in this county and of Kilmarack parish in Inverness-shire have been transferred to Urray. John Stirling esq. D.L., J.P. of Fairburn; Col. James Alexander Francis H. Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth; James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.P., J.P. of Dochfour, and the trustees of the late George A. Gillanders, of Highfield, are the principal landowners. The area previous to the alteration of the boundary was 72,640 acres; rateable value of present area, £12,976; in 1891 the population was 2,283.

Muir-of-Ord is a considerable village in this parish, with a station on the Highland railway, from which is a branch line to Fortrose.

ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS county, lying on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded on the north-east, east and south-east by the county of Northumberland and by a small corner of Cumberland, south and south-west by Dumfries-shire, west by Selkirk and Edinburgh-shire and north by Berwickshire; the shape of the county is extremely irregular, and it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of 40 miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about 30 miles. The area of the shire contains 665 square miles, or 425,656 acres, about one half of which is brought into cultivation. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviot-dale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the Alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles. The population in 1891 consisted of 25,010 males and 28,731 females; total, 53,741, and in 1881 a total of 53,442. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 10,906, and in 1881, 10,389. In size Roxburgh is the thirteenth, and in population the sixteenth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History &c.—The earlier traditions assign this part of Caledonia to the Gadeni and Ottadinii, and after being occupied by the Romans, as remains of forts, camps and roads show, from A.D. 79 to 410, it fell into the joint possession of the Strath-clyde Britons, on the west, and the Bernicians on the east, to whom succeeded in 573 the kings of Northumbria, then embracing the country between the Forth and Humber and across from the German Ocean to the Wigtownshire coast; to this period belongs St. Boisil, the head of the monastery at Old Melrose, after whom the town of St. Boswells is named. This county shared the shifting fate of the Northumbrian kingdom up to 954, when it was reduced to an earldom, and in the next century Malcolm Ceaunmor got back the present border counties for Scotland, and in or about 1157, under Malcolm IV. the border line was definitely settled, and from that time forward this border county had to bear the burden of the various disputes between the sovereigns of the two kingdoms. In 1215 John burnt Roxburgh, and in 1292 the English court of King's Bench sat at Roxburgh, and early in the 13th century, Edward II. held court in the same town and a little later the English burnt Dryburgh abbey; in 1460 Roxburgh, which had been held by the English for 50 years, was re-captured by the Scots and dismantled. In 1566 Queen Mary held a court at Jedburgh and rode thence to Hermitage Castle to see her favourite, Earl Bothwell. In 1715 the Highlanders held Kelso for a few days on their way into England, and in 1745 Prince Charles stayed a night at Kelso. The district is intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and another class of antiquities belonging to the county are towers or castles; among them the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh and Hermitage Castle (in Liddesdale). The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Mel-rose and Kelso.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The southern part of Roxburghshire is very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat. The following are the principal hills, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Auchopecairn, 2,382; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell, 1,830; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberslaw, 1,392; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the county is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile; in some parts a rich loam, in others, gravel and clay; the heavy clayey soil occupying the higher grounds, while loam occurs near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land. It has been ascertained that so early as the 12th century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress made in this branch of commerce Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. Apples and pears are now extensively cultivated in the orchards of Melrose, Jedburgh and Kelso. Excellent crops of wheat, barley and oats are now grown, as are also potatoes, peas, beans and turnips, the latter serving as food for the great num-bers of sheep and cattle that are reared, and for the disposal of which large stock sales are held at Hawick, Kelso and Newtown St. Boswells. The chief crops in 1894 were, oats, 30,789 acres; turnips, 22,877 acres; barley, 13,353 acres, and potatoes, 1,404 acres; hay of all kinds, 13,887 acres; the total corn crops being 44,734 acres and green crops, 25,201 acres; the land under grass, 57,295 acres, and permanent pasture, 53,286; the total area of land and water being 428,624 acres and total under crops of all kinds, 180,597; heath and mountain land, 213,841 acres and woods and plantations, 15,084. The live stock comprised, horses, 4,435; cattle, 17,792; sheep, 511,909 and pigs, 3,757. The mineralogy of the shire is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland, but though wrought for some time it was ultimately abandoned; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern por-tion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but the inhabitants are still supplied from Dumfries-shire, Edinburghshire, or North-umberland. The manufactures of Roxburghshire do not vary much. The staple of the county is the woollen trade, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, where flannels, blan-kets, tartans, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively produced. The salmon fisheries of the Tweed are of consequence, and yield handsome rents to the proprietors

Rivers and Railways.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are as follows:—the Tweed, which enters the county near the influx of the Ettrick and winds through the vales of Melrose and Kelso, and in a course of 30 miles receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot, and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelso, after passing through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from 30 to 40 miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Kealie waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddle rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of 4 or 5 miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddle are the Her-mitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Black-burn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers rise in this county, and enter-ing England, fall into the sea at Tynemouth and Coquet Isle. The lochs are small and few in number, the principal being Yet-holm Loch, which is about a mile and a half in circumference. The railway system is in the hands of the North British company, and comprises a line from Carlisle, which entering the county at Kershopefoot station, passes through Hawick and St. Boswells, and leaves the county at Bowland station, a little south-west of Lauder; this has branches from Riccarton Junction to Saughtree, and thence to Hexham and Newcastle; from St. Boswells to Kelso, via Roxburgh, from which place a branch goes to Jedburgh; a second branch goes from St. Boswell's to Earlston, Duns and Ber-wick, and a line from Melrose to Falkirk; and the North-Eastern railway has a branch from Berwick-on-Tweed, via Coldstream, to join the North British at Kelso.

Division, Representation &c.—The county comprises 30 civil parishes and the part of 1 joint parish, and has 35 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 2 others, all contained in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale and presbyteries of Kelso, Jedburgh, Earls-ton and Selkirk, except Castleton, which is in Langholm presby-tery synod of Dumfries; it contains only one royal burgh—Jed-burgh—which previous to the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder, in returning a member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county. The parliamentary constituency for 1894-5 numbered (including Jedburgh), 5,988. The valuation of the county for 1894-5 was £355,198, including railways.

ANCRUM is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district, and is 5 miles in length by 5 broad, and is bounded south-east for about 5 miles by the river Teviot, west by Minto and Lilliesleaf, north by St. Boswells and north-east by Maxton and Roxburgh. The village is pleasantly seated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, 2½ miles west from Jedfoot Bridge station on the Roxburgh and Jedburgh branch and 4 east from Belsis station on the St. Boswells and Hawick section of the North British railway, 11 south-west from Kelso, 11 north-east from Hawick and 4 north-west from Jedburgh. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of poet Thomson, author of "The Seasons;" one of the caves just mentioned is still pointed out, in which, it is said, he frequently retired to indulge in his reveries, and on that account is called "Thomson's Cave." Wm. Buchan M.D. the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," issued in 1770, and other medical works, was born in this village in 1729. part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. Monteviot House, in a large park, is the residence of the Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C., LL.D. Chesters is the residence of Thomas E. Ogilvie esq. J.P.; Elliston House, of The Hon. George Grey Dalrymple D.L., J.P. Ancrum House, the residence of Sir William Monteath Scott bart. D.L., J.P. stands in a delightful position, and commands some picturesque prospects. Sir William M. Scott bart. is lord of the manor, and Sir George Brisbane Douglas D.L., J.P. of Springwood park, Kelso, and the Marquess of Lothian are the principal landowners. The population of the parish in 1891 was 1,241; acreage, 10,295; rateable value, £10,690.

Longnewton is a hamlet in this parish.

BOWDEN is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district of Melrose; it is about 5 miles from north to south and from ¾ to 5 from east to west, and is bounded on the west by Selkirkshire, north by Melrose, east by St. Boswells and south by Lilliesleaf. The village stands in a low situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed, and is a mile and a half from St. Boswells Railway station on the North British railway and 3 south from Melrose. The parish comprise a portion of the Eildon hills, from which the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. The vestiges of a Roman military road, with circular stations or encampments, may be traced in this district, and a ruin at Holydean, at an early period a strong fortification, and the ancient residence of the Dukes of Roxburghe. Midholm, or Midlem, is a small village in Bowden parish, pleasantly situated on rising ground, 4 miles south-east from Selkirk. Acreage of Bowden parish, 7,668; rateable value, £6,867; population in 1881, 769, and in 1891, 694.

NEW CASTLETON is a modern village in an extensive mountainous parish, formerly known by the name of Castletown, but more generally by the popular title of Liddesdale, being in the vale of the Liddle water, and in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district. The village, which owes its rise to Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. 1746-1812, and which has superseded the old parish village (a little further up the vale), consists principally of two long streets of houses, which occupy a hugh on the right bank of the Liddle in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district, on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale; it has a station on the Riddings Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway, and is 26 miles south-south-west from Jedburgh 20 south from Hawick, and 10 north-east from Canonby. In the parish are also two stations on the North British railway, one at Steel Road, 5 miles north from New Castleton, and another at Riccarton Junction, 7 miles north, where the line from Newcastle-on-Tyne joins the Edinburgh section. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth in the north, but only 3 at its extreme south, and is bounded on the west by Dumfries-shire, east by Cumberland and Northumberland, and north by Southdean, Hobkirk, Cavers and Teviothead. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good sheep pasturage. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called Dead Water, on account of its stagnant appearance. Through the centre runs the Hermitage, a feeder of the Liddle. Mineral springs, which are of considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thorlies Hope and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. In the parish are four mountains, viz:—Roan Fell, 1,862 feet, Din Fell, 1,735 feet, Cooms Fell, 1,609 feet, and Tinnis Hill, 1,326 feet high. Besides the places of worship, a mission hall was built in 1888, at a cost of about £1,100, raised by public subscription. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the 13th century, by Comyn, Earl of Monteith, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch, and during this operation several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring evidently of very old manufacture, bearing the inscription "In Broaderlie Amite." There is a branch of the British Linen Co. Bank in the village. Fairs are held in April, May, September and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 67,858; rateable value, £13,181, and in 1881 it had a population of 2,256, and in 1891, 2,023, of which the village contained 820.

CAVERS is a parish in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district; it is of very irregular figure, and is about 13 miles long by about 2½ to 3½ broad, bounded on the west by Teviothead and Hawick, north-west by Minto, east by Jedburgh and Hobkirk, and south by Castleton. The church is about 5 miles east from Hawick station on the North British railway. Shankend station on the Riccarton Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway is in the southern part of the parish; the line near the station crosses the Longside brook by a viaduct. Maiden Paps Mountain, 1,677 feet high, is at the southern extremity of the parish. Cavers House, in a small park, is the residence of Captain Edward Palmer Douglas J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area of Cavers with Kirktown is 25,056; rateable value of Cavers, £19,184; the population in 1881 was 1,318, and in 1891, 920.

Denholm is a small village in the parish of Cavers, 1¾ miles south-west from Hassendean station on the Hawick and Melrose and Kelso sections of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Jedburgh, and 5 north-east from Hawick, pleasantly seated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a stone bridge erected in 1864. Leading up towards the hills from a "holm," or a meadow, is a richly wooded "dene," or ravine, which presents a series of romantic views, and from which Denholm takes its name. The village was much improved some years since, at a consideable expense, by the late James Douglas esq. of Cavers. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. John Leyden M.D. physician and poet, was born here, 1775; a monument has been erected to his memory in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower declines into rich arable fields. In 1881 the population of Denholm was 592, and in 1891, 475.

Kirkton or Kirktown, formerly a parish, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894 (57 and 58 Vict. c. 58), added for civil purposes to Cavers, but still remains a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes. It is 3 miles south-east from Hawick, and is in Jedburgh small debt court district. Captain Edward P. Douglas is the principal landowner. The rateable value is £4,800.

EDNAM (or Edenham) is a parish, in Kelso poor combination, in the small debt court district of Kelso, bounded on the north-east by Berwickshire, south-east by Sprouston, south-west by Kelso and north-west by Stichill. The village is pleasantly seated on the small river Eden, about 3 miles north-east from Kelso station on the North British railway. It is celebrated as the birthplace, in 1700, of the poet James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," his father having been incumbent of the parish; he was educated in Jedburgh for the church, but came to London in 1725 and published the poem "Winter," which was succeeded by "Summer" in 1727, by "Spring" in 1728, and in 1730 by "Autumn," and among other works was the "Castle of Indolence;" he died in 1748; a monument erected to the poet stands on an eminence near the village, and there is also one in Westminster Abbey. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is exceedingly well cultivated and enclosed. Hendersyde Park is the residence of Sir Richard John Waldie-Griffith bart. The Earl of Dudley is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area is 3,849 acres; rateable value, £7,169; population in 1881, 613, and in 1891, 581.

GALASHIELS, a parliamentary burgh and parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Selkirkshire.

HAWICK.

HAWICK is a manufacturing town, a free burgh of barony, police and parliamentary burgh, head of a poor combination and parish, 50 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Kelso, 11 south from Selkirk and 45 north from Carlisle, on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley route of the North Br tish railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. It gives name to a parliamentary group of towns, comprising Hawick, Galashiels and Selkirk burghs. The town is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot rivers: by the former stream it is divided into two nearly equal parts, wh ch are connected by three stone bridges. The village of Wilton, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included within the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one re-erected in 1865, and several foot bridges. From its approximate pos tion to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt: one of the most destructive occurred in 1570, when it was set fire to by the English under Lord Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets and minor thoroughfares extend ng from it.

The environs of Hawick are much admired, the banks of the Teviot being extremely picturesque and delightful. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population.

The town is generally well paved and lighted; the water supply, for many years defective, was in 1865 considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot 5 miles above the town, and this was supplemented in 1881 by a supply from Dodburn in the same locality: the water is excellent in quality: these water schemes cost about £50,000. A thorough system of drainage has since been carried out. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period: but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1545 by James Douglas, Comte de Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May of the same year this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two ba lies and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all the municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing town council, made applicat on to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is now divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and town clerk, and, besides acting as custodiers of the burgh property, exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and bailies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient pol ce force is established, and a court for petty offences is held daily; the justice of peace court being held as required, and a sheriff's court is held weekly for the disposal of civil and criminal cases. The Town Hall and Municipal Buildings were rebuilt in 1885, at a cost of £15,000; this includes Free Library and Reading Room, the Free Libraries Act having been adopted here in 1878. The Buccleuch Memorial was built by public subscription, at a cost of about £5,000, to commemorate the friendly relationship which has always existed between the town and the house of Buccleuch, and consists of a Science and Art Institute and Museum. The Exchange is a large and handsome build ng, erected in 1865. A combination poorhouse was built in 1857, at a cost of £4,000, to hold about 130 inmates. There are two Masonic Halls in the burgh: Lodge St. John's, No. 111, had its charter granted in 1768; Lodge St. James's, No. 424, occupies a new splendidly furnished hall in Union street, and had its charter granted in 1863. In the burgh are a circulat ng library and public reading room, furnished with London and provincial papers, also an Archæological Society, with which is connected a museum containing memorials of the ancient history of the border and other antiquarian relics and curiosit es. A farmers' club, or agricultural society, was formed here in 1776. Another club of the same kind, "The Teviotdale," was established in 1859. There is also the West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, which has an annual exhibition of live stock. Four banking agencies are in the town, namely, the British Linen Company Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland L mited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. One of the princ pal hotels here, called The Tower, in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not destroyed by the forces of Lord Sussex; at a later period it was the frequent residence of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and w fe of James, Duke of Monmouth K.G. executed in 1685.

Hawick ranks as one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the product on of both the town enjoys a fair reputation. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every Monday, and at the special sales during the summer as many as 200,000 to 250,000 lambs are occasionally sold. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, the 21st of September and the 8th of November; any of these days happening on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses and cattle are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. The town is noted for its great annual festival known as "the common riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries; it originated, according to tradition, from the circumstance of some young men of the town having, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), surpr sed a party of marauding English during the night, about 2 miles below the town, and after slaying the greater part of them took possession of their colour. A fac-simile of this colour or ensign is now borne by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the occasion and dubbed with the title of "cornet," who accompanies the authorities in process on round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. The estate known as Wilton Lodge was purchased by the town council and laid out as a public park at a cost of £14,000; it was opened in May, 1890. Stobs Castle is the residence of S r William F. A. Eliott bart. and Muselee, George W. Hutton-Riddell esq. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Haw ck parish, now including Wilton parish, comprises an area of 14,873 acres; rateable value, £68,923; the population of the civ l parish, including Wilton, in 1891 was 20,546, and of the ecclesiastical, 5,619; of the wards—first or North High street, 4,056; second or South High street, 4,731; third or Slitrig, 1,835; fourth or Teviot, 4,954, and fifth or Wilton, 3,628; total, 19,204; of the parliamentary borough—Galashiels, 17,252; Hawick, 19,204, and Selkirk, 5,788; total, 42,244.

Wilton, which forms part of the burgh, has now, under the prov sions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," been amalgamated for civil purposes with Hawick.
